PREFACE.

At the beginning of the researches made by Miss Anne Spottswood Dandridge on the genealogy of the Forman family in Maryland, it was hoped that a common ancestor for all persons of the name could be found. This hope is as yet unfulfilled, but it has nevertheless been thought best to include in the book not only the descendants of Robert Forman, who died in 1719-20, but also another family whose ancestor came to Maryland from Monmouth Co., New Jersey, later in the same century—the eighteenth. Much information had been collected regarding the New Jersey family before it appeared that the connection, if any, was remoter than at first supposed, and a good deal has been since added relating to other branches of the New Jersey family whose earliest ancestor in America, also named Robert Forman, died in Long Island in 1671. There will also be found in these pages notices of other families of the name whose connection with the two mentioned is as yet untraced.

It is proper to state that, while the book has been principally compiled by Miss Dandridge, much additional matter has been added by various contributors, to all of whom I desire to renew the expression of my thanks. The following have been especially helpful in rendering assistance:

Mrs. Josephine Forman Rodgers of Washington, D. C., Hon. E. E. Farman of Warsaw, N. Y., Mr. J. Clayton Forman of Cleveland, Ohio, Dr. W. B. Forman of Florida, Mr. Charles Forman of New Orleans, La., and Hon. E. P. Dismukes of Columbus, Ga., and others whose names will be mentioned in the body of the work.

Additional information and corrections will be welcomed.

THE FORMAN GENEALOGY.

Genealogy of the Forman Family of Maryland—Descended from Robert Forman who died in 1720.

1. From the Index of Early Settlers in the Land office at Annapolis, Maryland, Liber 18, folio 94, it appears that ROBERT FORMAN arrived in Maryland in the year 1674. Whether he came directly from England or was an offshoot of a family already settled in the colonies—perhaps of the family which had settled in Long Island a generation before, is unknown. That such a removal would not be singular is shown by the case of Augustine Herman who came from New Amsterdam, made the famous map and founded Bohemia Manor in Maryland.

Robert Forman became the owner of "Lewstern," a tract of land of 200 acres on the north side of the Chester River, surveyed for him on October 12, 1704 (Rent Roll of Kent Co. page 65, MS in Md. Hist. Socy.), and granted to him, according to the deed to Calder hereafter to be mentioned, by letters patent of the Lord Proprietary, on October 10, 1707. His will (at Annapolis) shows that he also owned the upper part of "Blackhall's Hermitage," 100 acres, also on Chester River. In 1707 it appears (Rent Roll of Kent Co. page 59) that 100 acres of "Blackhall's Hermitage" was "possest" by Edward Forman, whose relationship to Robert is unknown. From Edward it seems to have passed to Robert. Nothing more is known of Robert's life except what may be learned from the following:

"Whereas There hath been Eight hundred twenty-five thousand Nyne hundred Seventy Nyne pounds of Tobacco Expended Layd out & disbursed by several of the Inhabitants of this Province in the late Expedicon against the Nanticoke Indians and other the necessary Charges of this province which hath been examined stated and allowed by the upper and lower houses of this present General Assembly To the intent therefore That the same may be satisfied and paid to these persons to whom the same is due Bee itt Enacted by the Right Hon^{ble} the Lord Proprietary by and with the advice of this present General Assembly and the Authority of the same That the said Eight hundred twenty five thousand Nyne Hundred Seventy Nyne pounds of Tobacco be paid in the manner & form as is hereafter Expressed by in Equal Assessment uppon the persons & Estates of the Inhabitants of this Province And be payd to the severall persons to whome the same is due as aforesaid Any Law Statute Custome or vseage to the Contrary thereof Notwithstanding."

Then follow the amounts to be paid to the persons named, among whom Robert Foreman of Kent County is to be paid 300 lbs.

(Procedure of the Assembly of Maryland, October, November, 1678.)

In Robert Forman's will, which is extant, and which we subjoin, the name is spelled Foreman. To those who are at all acquainted with old records it is well known that small differences in the spelling of proper names signify nothing, being generally due to the carelessness or ignorance of the clerk.

NOTE:—Although as a rule it has been attempted in this work to finish with each branch before taking up the next younger, we now give the will of the second son, a little out of the proper order, since the line is not carried further.

WILL OF ROBT. FOREMAN, (JUNIOR).¹

“ I Robert Foreman of Kent County in the province of Maryland.
I give and bequeath unto Elizabeth, my dearly beloved wife, all my stock of horses, cattle and hogs, together with all my household goods and movables.

I give to my well beloved son, Walter Foreman, all and singular the lands, messuages and tenements to him and his heirs forever.

Exrs. wife Elizabeth and son Walter.

prob. July 27, 1762.

The order in which Robert Forman's children were born is not altogether certain, and is obtained partly from the will and partly from a deed from Robert's oldest son Arthur, another son John and his wife, and Elizabeth their sister and her husband Richard Chaddock, by which they all convey to James Calder, attorney at law of Chestertown, Md., the portion of the Lewstern estate which had been devised by the will to William and John. The deed recites that William died after his father without issue, and the will is attested by only two witnesses; the lands presumably did not pass thereby, and estate in fee descended to Arthur as heir at law of Robert. Arthur therefore became a party to the deed for the benefit of the others. The price paid was twenty pounds Maryland currency to John and his wife and Elizabeth and her husband, Arthur receiving the nominal sum of five shillings. This deed is dated February 8, 1733, and is recorded in Liber J. S. No. 16, folio 432 etc. (A Land Record for Kent Co., Md.).

Arthur was clearly the eldest son. That the daughters Mildred and Mary, who were married at the time of the will, were older than their brother Robert is uncertain, but since Robert the younger seems to have been not yet provided with an establishment of his own as his eldest brother had been, it is presumed his married sisters were older than he - they may, indeed, have been older than Arthur. As the three youngest children are named as Charles, William and John, and Charles is stated to be the youngest, the proper order would seem to be John, William, and Charles. The proper place of Elizabeth, the youngest daughter, is as difficult to determine as the places of her sisters. She may be assigned however to the place between Robert and John.

The family of Robert, thus conjecturally arranged, is as follows:

WILLIAM FORMAN.

William Forman married Mary Raymond of Delaware 1765. He was the second son of Arthur Forman and Mary ——. Their children were as follows: Jesse, Francis, John, Raymond, Mary and Elizabeth. There was a strong feeling in the states of New Jersey, Delaware and Maryland at this time against negro slavery. William called his children around him and told them that the slaves and a large tract of land was theirs by inheritance, and they could take their choice, either to free their slaves or keep them in their service. A few of the family servants to whom he was attached, he would keep and would give them their freedom as they became self-sustaining. The rest of the negroes he divided between his sons. His wife—Mary Raymond—in her will gave to her daughters, Mary and Elizabeth, all of her property, which she inherited from her mother's estate, consisting of money and real estate. William Forman was an officer in Second Delaware Regiment during the Revolutionary War. Was promoted for bravery at the battle of Germantown, October 4th, 1777.

FRANCIS FORMAN.

Francis Forman—second son of William and Mary Raymond Forman—was born about 1773. After receiving his portion of his father's estate, he moved to Hagerstown, Maryland. He married Anne Elizabeth Immel 1806. They had seven children, which were as follows: ¹Arthur, ²Anne Elizabeth, ³Evelina, ⁴Caroline, ⁵William Raymond, ⁶Mary Jane, ⁷Frances Keller, who died in infancy. Francis Forman was an Episcopalian. A very serious difference arose in the church to which he belonged, and ended in the church closing its doors.

Taken at the age of 83 Years, in 1856.

He afterwards united himself with the First Presbyterian Church in Baltimore, Md., and remained a good and consistent member of the church until his death in 1857. He was elected a "member of the committee" of the First Presbyterian Church in Baltimore 1836, and served until 1854, when ill health, with the infirmities of old age compelled him to resign. He was confined to his room for several years, and was always cheerful and happy, and was noted for his extreme politeness, and noble deeds of charity. Francis Forman served in the war of 1812. The Records, War Department, Washington City, D. C., show that Francis Forman enlisted in Captain John Berry's Company, 1st Maryland Regiment of Artillery. (Col. Harris) war 1812. His grand daughter Anne Elizabeth Forman Dismukes is a member of the National Society of the United States Daughters of the War of 1812, through his services, is one of the Vice Presidents of the Georgia State Division, and a charter state member. She has in her possession a pair of very handsome old brass andirons, with shovel, tongs and holders all of brass, which descended to her through her father, as family relics for several generations, also two very quaint old bronze and brass candelabra, old heirlooms, and a suit of old colonial style solid mahogany furniture. In thinking of incidents in my father's (Arthur Forman) life; I well remember him telling his children that when he was a boy, he went one day into the cellar of his father's home, 18 South Eutaw St. in Baltimore, Md., and seeing a strange wretched looking negro, he was much frightened and ran screaming to his mother, who upon going into the cellar found an old family servant, who had been set free, sick and starved—the cook had taken him in and secreted him for a week. Father lost no time in having his family physician called and every attention was given to him, (old Uncle Bob as he was familiarly called). As soon as he recovered, suitable employment was found and he was cared for as long as he lived by his former master. The Mrs. Allison who is buried in the Forman cemetery was no relation, but a poor deaf woman and a friend of the family, who had no relatives, was given a home by my grandfather, Francis Forman, and sleeps in the same enclosure with the Forman family. He was known always as a good Christian, and whose hand was always dispensing charity.

ARTHUR I. FORMAN.

Arthur Immel Forman, son of Francis Forman and Anne Elizabeth Forman, was born in Baltimore, Maryland, October 12th, 1807. He married Mary Anne Booth of Shenstone, (Booth Homestead), Nottoway Co., Virginia, in 1836. They had four children, which are as follows: ¹Francis Forman, who died in infancy; ²William Booth, ³Ellen D., and ⁴Anne Elizabeth. Arthur Forman was a college graduate and entered the office of Mr. Osgood, where he read law. Just as he finished his law course, being troubled with a weak throat he decided that a warmer climate would suit his health better. His father gave him a horse, saddle bags and one hundred dollars with which to begin life. He rode all the way on horseback to Montgomery, Alabama, where he settled, but was only there one year as malarial fever almost depopulated the town, caused by so much clearing of new land by the settlers. A friend of his, Richard Taylor, had moved to Tallahassee, Leon Co., Florida and wrote him that it was a garden spot, and to come there to live. He decided to do so, and took the journey on horseback. He was there about two years. In 1832 malarial fever was very prevalent and fatal from the same cause—land clearing. His friend Richard Taylor was stricken with fever and died. There were not well people enough to nurse the sick. He could find no one to sit up with the remains of his friend Richard Taylor, so he wrapped himself in a blanket and lay on the floor to keep guard over the dead. In the night he heard a noise, some one trying to force the front door open, after calling several times with no response he threw a heavy iron weight or dumb bell striking the door and splitting it from top to bottom, narrowly missing a negro man's head, and giving the negro such a fright that he almost died. The heavy air laden with malaria so harassed his bronchial trouble that he moved again to the little sister city of Tallahassee, twenty miles north—Quincy, named for John Quincy Adams who was then president of the United States. There he met Mary Ann Booth, who was visiting her uncle, Rev. Freeman Fitzgerald of Virginia. They were married and he purchased a plantation on which to place a number of negroes, inherited by his wife from her father's estate,—David, Winnie the laundress, Pauline the seamstress, Woodville, Caswell, Cleborne, Charlotte, Joshua the weaver, Eliza the spinner, (one of these spinning wheels is now in the possession of Mrs. E. P. Dismukes, Columbus, Ga.) Merritt, Mulville, David the younger, Martha, Jane, Rosa, and Emma.

Mr. Hudson Muse¹ of Petersburg, Va., married Harriet Booth, a sister of Mrs. Forman. The two brothers-in-law formed a co-partnership. Mr. Forman built himself a house in the town where he lived and looked after the education of the children. He was on the Board of Education in the State High School. Mr. Muse spent most of his time in the Ocklocknee and River Plantation directing the overseers. Mr. Forman told his children many incidents of Indians of whom there were a great many all around them. He was a member of the Military Home Guards. His partner, Mr. Muse was in active service, enlisting in Captain Charles H. Du Pont's company in the Seminole Indian war, 1835. In those days men slept in their homes with their flint² and steel lock muskets by their beds, a chair near by with a dark cloak thrown around it, to keep the hostile Indians from seeing the light in the room. In those days they had no matches and had to strike fire with the flint. Mr. Arthur Forman was one of the men detailed to escort the Indians to Tampa, Florida, where they embarked for the west, he spoke the Indian dialect well and often said the accent that they gave their names was much prettier than the present pronunciation. The last syllable was emphasized. Mr. Forman was senior warden in St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Quincy, Florida, for many years, until his death. His three children were confirmed by Bishop Rutledge in 1865. At the close of the Civil War, there was an execution against the church for repairs done, there was no money in the treasury, and Mr. Forman paid the debt, six hundred dollars, had good titles made, and gave the church and lot as a present to the diocese of Florida.

Mr. Forman was Justice of the Peace for years, and served his country in many capacities. He was a member of the Florida legislature, 1840-1850. The records have been poorly kept. He was mayor of Quincy in the forties. He wrote many articles on developing the resources of the states by railroads. He often said that when he was in the legislature, important papers had to be sent to Washington, D. C., by messenger on horseback, which took him twenty-one days to reach his destination. There was a little raw hide trunk that he used to keep all his writings in, but after his death the house was rented out, and many valuable things lost. His health demanded much out of door exercise. He kept two servants, Anthony and Merritt to cultivate his orange trees and gardens. His home was a typical southern mansion, where a cordial greeting awaited all visitors. He belonged to the Home Guards during the Civil War. At the battle of Natural Bridge, thirty miles south of Tallahassee on the gulf coast, the booming of caunons could be distinctly heard. Quincy was Gen. Howell Cobb's headquarters until the close of the war. Mr. Forman's only son Dr. Wm. Booth Forman was seriously wounded at the battle of Chickamauga and was sent to Marietta, Ga. His father went to bring him home, and as most of the railroads had been destroyed, traveling was very rough and the trip was too much for him as he never seemed to regain his strength.

When the news of the surrender of General Robert E. Lee reached our home two weeks later, it was not credited. His advice to his slaves when told of their freedom, was to remain with him until the end of the year 1865 and that he would pay them wages. They knew that they had a good master and home, and they kept steadily on with their work, and many of them remained with him until his death in 1867. To this day those who are left, speak of him as "good old master."

Arthur Forman told his children many reminiscences of his early life, one among them was that he was noted in school for his strength. Whenever a new boy was entered at school, he was always called upon to measure his strength and dexterity with him, and nine times out of ten he threw his man down with a great shout from the boys. He was but a little boy during the bombardment of Baltimore in the war of 1812. He said he could never forget his fathers last words to him when he bade him goodbye to enlist, "to be a man and take care of his mother." All night long he sat up with her watching the magnificent sight of the bombs bursting in air, and it looked to him as if the heavens and earth were on fire. He had the silver in a basket by him, while his mother kept the little ones near her, so that if the house caught on fire they could escape to a place of safety.

Arthur Forman was ill only a few hours and passed away after living the life of a good Christian. He often spoke of Francis Scott Key who was an intimate friend of the family, with a great deal of affection.

ANCESTRY OF MRS. ARTHUR I. FORMAN (MARY ANN BOOTH).

Mary Ann Booth, who married Arthur I. Forman, was born at "Shenstone" in Nottoway Co., Virginia, April 10, 1810, and died May 3, 1892, and is buried at Quincy, Florida. Her father was William Booth, son of Gilliam Booth and Martha Cryer.

The family of Booth is of English descent and undoubtedly settled in Virginia prior to the Revolution. There were nine of the Booth name from Virginia, and probably more, in the Revolutionary War. ¹Gilliam Booth died in Dinwiddie Co., in 1810. His son William removed to Salem, Botetourt Co., Virginia, in 1817. When Wm. Booth moved to Lawrence Co., Alabama, he first settled and built a large brick mansion; he had twelve children. The homestead was called Shenstone, after his old home in Virginia. Mr. George Garth now owns the old Booth place. Mr. Booth's brother-in-law Rev. Freeman Fitzgerald built Rocky Hill, and Littlebury Jones built the brick house where Mr. Harvey Gilchrist now lives. Mr. Wm. Booth went in 1825 on horseback to Franklin, Tennessee, on business and to visit a friend, Mr. Foster, at whose home he died very suddenly, and is buried there in the Foster inclosure. He married Mary Ann Fitzgerald in 1792. She was the daughter of a revolutionary soldier, Major William Fitzgerald, and Sarah Epes his wife.

Major William Fitzgerald² served throughout the Revolution, raised a company at his own expense, was promoted to Major at the battle of Guilford, North Carolina, where he was stunned by the concussion of a cannon ball, and lay insensible two days. He took part in the surrender at Yorktown and was honorably discharged at the close of the war. He is referred to in the Virginia Magazine of History and Biography for October, 1900. He was the son of William and Elizabeth (Irby) Fitzgerald. His wife Sarah Eppes whom he married in 1777, was the daughter of Richard Eppes of Bermuda Hundred, who married Martha Bolling. Major William Fitzgerald died in Nottoway Co., Virginia, in 1818.

The Virginia Historical Magazine for 1896, p. 396, states that Richard Eppes was a member of the House of Burgesses from Chesterfield Co. in 1752, '55, '58, and '62 to '65, and probably other years.

Among his legatees were the children of his niece Ann, daughter of his sister Mary Isham, and £200 apiece to the daughters of his nephew, Henry Isham, late of Virginia, deceased, by Katherine his wife.

Henry Isham, son of William Isham and Mary Brett, his wife, came from England to Virginia and married Katherine, widow of Joseph Royal of Henrico County. He died about 1675, leaving issue I. Henry, died unmarried about 1679. His will is on record in Henrico Co., Va., dated 13 Nov., 1678, proved Feb'y 1, 1679. He gives to "my honored mother Mrs. Katherine Isham" one-third of his personal property; to his sister "Miss Ann Isham" one-third of his personal property; to his sisters, "Mrs. Mary Randolph" and "Miss Ann Isham" his plantation in Charles City County, called Doggams, to be equally divided; to William Randolph the rest of his estate in England, Virginia and elsewhere, and makes him executor. II. Mary married William Randolph of Turkey Island. III. Ann married Colonel Francis Eppes of Henrico.

The will of Mrs. Katherine Isham, dated August 10, 1686, was proved in Henrico Co., December, 1686: bequests * * * the residue of her money to her two daughters Mary Randolph and Ann Epes and gives each two silver salt cellars: * * * to her grandson Isham Epes, a negro: * * * to daughter Ann Epes her seal ring, a pair of silver clasps and a silver bodkin; * * * Her son Joseph Royal, and son-in-law Francis Epes, executors. Some writers have given the name of the third child of Henry and Katherine Isham as "Elizabeth" but the extracts from the wills of Henry Isham (Jr.) and Mrs. Katherine Isham give the name "Ann." All agree that the daughter married Colonel Francis Eppes of Henrico.

Col. Francis Eppes of Henrico, born 1659, died about January, 1719, married Ann Isham and had issue—Francis, Isham, William and others. Francis Eppes, son of Col. Francis Eppes and Ann Isham, his wife, born about 1685—died in 1734. His will, dated Nov. 7, 1733, was proved in Henrico, December, 1734. He married Sarah ——— and had issue—Francis, William, Richard and others.

Richard Eppes, son of Francis and Sarah Eppes, was born about —, died 1765. His will is recorded in Chesterfield Co., dated May 20, 1762, and proved at July Court 1765. He married first Martha, daughter of Robert and Anne Cocke Bolling, and had issue by this marriage—Francis, Sarah and Martha. In his will he disposes of a large estate. One item: "I give to my daughter Sarah * * * so much money as will make up the legacy left her by her Grand Mother Anne Bolling, decd., six hundred pounds current money."

Sarah Eppes, daughter of Richard and Martha Bolling Eppes, born Nov. 17, 1757, married Major William Fitzgerald of Nottoway County, Va., in 1777, and had issue—Mary Ann Fitzgerald and others.

Mary Ann Booth, daughter of William and Mary Ann Fitzgerald Booth, born April 10, 1810, in Nottoway County, Va., married Arthur I. Forman in Quincy, Florida, Oct. 19, 1836, and had issue—Anne Elizabeth Forman and others.

Anne Elizabeth Forman, daughter of Arthur I. and Mary Ann Booth Forman, married Elisha P. Dismukes in Quincy, Florida, Dec. 19, 1865.

Richard Cocke came from England and settled in Virginia prior to 1632. He was member of the House of Burgesses in 1632, 1644 and 1645. He married and had issue, Richard Cocke the Younger of Malvern Hill. His will is on record in Henrico Co., Va., dated Oct. 4, 1665. Richard Cocke the Younger married and had issue, Anne Cocke, who married Robert Bolling, son of Robert Bolling, who came to this country from London, England, in 1660, and his second wife, Ann Stith, daughter of Major John Stith.

Anne Cocke, daughter of Richard Cocke the Younger, married Robert Bolling and had issue—Martha Bolling and others.

Martha Bolling, daughter of Robert and Anne Cocke Bolling, married Richard Eppes of Bermuda Hundred and had issue—Sarah and others.

Copy of Letter.

January 29th, 1902.

Dear Sister:

In response to your request I write you of my experience in the Civil War, 1861-1865. My father, Arthur Forman of Baltimore, Md., sent me to the Georgia Military State Institute at Marietta in October, 1858. From there I went to the Virginia Military Institute at Lexington, Virginia, in October, 1859. Passing through Washington, D. C., I visited the White House, where I met President Buchanan and Miss Lane, the President's niece. I then visited my father's relatives in Baltimore. When in Staunton, Va., the military were out to receive the Hon. Stephen A. Douglas, who was a candidate for the Presidency of the United States, and in his speech he advised the South to fight for her rights in the Union. I remained at the V. M. I. until the fall of Ft. Sumter, April 12th, 1861, which event caused the secession of Virginia, her convention being in session at that time, considering the subject. I remember hearing a letter from General Winfield Scott, the ranking officer of our United States army at that time, read by Colonel Francis Smith, our Superintendent, before the Debating Society.

This letter stated that if the South seceded he would march two columns of 40,000 men each, one through Virginia down the Atlantic coast, and the other down the Mississippi Valley, they would meet at Mobile, Alabama, in 60 days. Some of the professors made addresses on the subject. Professor Stonewall Jackson, my teacher in mathematics, remained silent, but was known as a deep thinker. The professors were all graduates of West Point (N. Y.) Military Academy. They were Professors Jackson, Smith, Preston, Gilliam, author of Military Tactics, McClaus, Colson and others. A few days later we were summoned to ranks by the long roll call, and then Colonel Jackson made us a speech as follows: "Young men, of all wars, civil war is most to be dreaded, but if it must come, we draw the sword and throw away the scabbard." This, we cadets thought, was a long speech for our beloved teacher, for he was a silent hero of our bloody war. We cadets under Colonel Jackson, in a few hours after Virginia seceded, were en route to Richmond, where we were engaged in drilling the Army of Northern Virginia. We drilled the men one hour, and rested them one hour, from sunrise to sunset. Just before the battle of Manassas, Colonel Gilliam in a speech advised the cadets to go to their homes and raise companies, and drill them for the coming conflicts, and that our services were too precious to be lost by going as a body into battle, when we could benefit our country so much more by scattering, organizing, drilling raw recruits, &c. We occupied the Central Ladies Building at the Fairgrounds. The men were quartered in the cattle depots. As a drill master I was promoted 1st Lieutenant. The Inspectors of Elections allowed some of us to vote for Jefferson Davis for President of the Confederate States. On my return home I visited my mother's relatives in Nottoway Co., Va. Cousin Mary Fitzgerald of "The Castle" asked me "why we drilled the men almost to death." I answered, to keep up with our beloved commander, Col. Jackson, on the battle field. On reaching home in Quincy, Gadsden Co., Florida, I actively assisted in raising Company C, the color company of the 6th Florida Regiment. My cousin, Wm. Booth Malone, was made captain. I, his first lieutenant, was in charge of the Color Guard, ours being Company C, the center company. The sixth was organized with J. J. Finley, Colonel; McLean, Lieut. Col.; Lafayette Kenan, Major. The Regiment was ordered to report to the Army in Tennessee. We were transported to Columbus, Georgia, on Chattahoochee river boats, thence by rail to Chattanooga. Our Regiment was detached for action service in East Tennessee, on the alert for raiding parties, guarding bridges, fighting bushwhackers, &c. The people seemed mostly Unionist and unfriendly. Knoxville was our headquarters. We were ordered to join Gen. Kirby Smith's command in his Kentucky campaign. The Confederate Army crossed the mountains between Tennessee and Kentucky at Big Creek Gap. The Unionists at Cumberland Gap were cut off from a safe retreat, and narrowly escaped capture. We passed through a number of small towns in this wild section of Kentucky before reaching the beautiful blue grass region. At Richmond Gen. Kirby Smith with his devoted followers gained a signal victory. It was estimated that the Union Army lost about five thousand in killed and wounded. Here I was at work paroling prisoners, stacking captured rifles and caring for them. As we marched through Lexington, Ky., I remember well seeing the balconies filled with beautiful ladies, dressed in what looked to us like the height of fashion, waving their scarfs of welcome to our victorious, battle-scarred veterans, begrimed with the red dust of the battle fields, and their expressions of deep pity and sympathy touched our hearts. One very beautiful girl remarked, "oh, how dusty they look," to which one of the boys called out, "that we once had better clothes at home, that what we have on is good enough for the work we have to do." As soon as we rested, the ladies sent us baskets and baskets of good food, enough for every man. "God bless the ladies of Lexington," was heard on every side. We next marched through Harrodsburg and several other cities to Frankfort, where we inaugurated Governor Hawes at one o'clock p. m., while the roar of cannon could be heard in the distance. At first dark we burnt the bridge and marched South. Gen. Buell was marching after us with a large army of Unionists. Generals Bragg and Kirby Smith expected to be attacked. Gen. Bragg's command reached Perryville first, where they were attacked by a larger force of the enemy, who were driven back after a hard and bloody encounter. We had a wagon train 22 miles in length, and some cattle to protect. We made forced marches at night to avoid a battle. It had not rained for many weeks, and we were suffering for water. I shall never forget the large spring of water found, large enough for the entire army to quench thirst. After recrossing the mountains we were ordered to Cumberland Gap, from which place we could look into four states. Here the cold was intense. We built log fires to keep from freezing, so scarce was our clothing, and only one blanket apiece. Our companies were reduced to an average of seven men. The thousand miles forced marches and privations, had so thinned our ranks that our regiment was but a mere skeleton. I took a part of a horse's corn, divided with him, to parch and eat it, to fill an aching void. I saw men eat raw beef with a relish on the march and I shall never forget the sad expressions on the faces of those who fell by the wayside, and who were never reported as missing. We kept back Brownlow's raiders from capturing Knoxville, Tenn., where we lost some of our best officers and men. Whilst we were in East Tennessee we were ordered into the mountains to suppress bushwhackers, four companies of Cherokee Indians going with us. I was puzzled to know how these mountaineers subsisted. Nothing to eat but apples, a small patch of corn to make whiskey with, and a few onions, were visible. We were on the French Broad river, large tracts of land covered with dense ivy and laurel, and the people seemed half-civilized. We were next ordered to fall back, and the battle of Chickamauga was to be fought. Chickamauga, the Indian name for "The River of Death," most appropriate. The water is dark and angry looking. Before reaching Chickamauga we had a large body of Gen. Rosecrans' army cut off at McLenore's cave in a spur of the mountains, with the exception of one gap. Order was issued to close this gap, but through some misunderstanding this was not done, which precipitated this bloody carnage. When we moved into the cave there was one man lying dead. He was an officer, many canteens were lying around him; there was good water in a spring near by. On Saturday morning, September 19, 1863, as the sun was rising in the East, and mantling Mother Earth with its golden rays, the stillness was broken by the boom of cannon a short distance from us, followed by the bursting of a shell, sending its screaming fragments of iron through our ranks. I hastily ate my sweet potato, which I had roasted in the ashes, and that was all the breakfast I had.

Lieut. Hays, a sergeant and several men were killed by this explosion. Shortly after a terrible firing and yelling set in, and on our right as far as I could see or hear in this direction. I could tell by these yellings when the enemy were advancing and when retreating. This was kept up all the morning, retiring and advancing as reinforcements arrived, all amid the thunder of guns. We were in Gen. Buckner's division now, we were ordered to lie down with our faces to the ground before making this charge into death's ranks. Our regiment was ordered to take a Union division or corps. I can easily recall, as we lay behind one of our batteries, in an open skirt of woods, shot and shell flying over us, and among us, a desire prompted me to look down the line on my left, the men were as still as death, many of them were no doubt saying their last prayer before the charge. I called on the Lord to save me from sudden death. Orders were received to charge the enemy. Over the high fence we bounded, when suddenly Major Kenan halted us, with orders to lie down, and reported to Colonel Finley that the Seventh Florida and Fifty-fourth Virginia had not advanced; this left us unsupported. Col. Wade I think commanded the 54th Virginia. Orders came again to charge, and on we went, the brave 6th Florida regiment across this field of death. The very air was filled with shot, shell and flying balls. When near the enemy's batteries, this regiment almost unsupported, for somebody had blundered, was ordered to fall back, for in a few minutes the regiment had lost nearly half of its men. At this moment Captain Malone motioned me to come. I rushed up just in time to catch Captain Joseph White in my arms, and we two laid him down, his thigh was broken. I returned to take command of our poor fragment of a company; sending Adler one of our men to Capt. White's assistance; in a few minutes a grape shot struck poor Adler in the head, killing him instantly. In the charge across the field one of my men right in front of me fell on his knees, blood spurted from his mouth, he fell with his face to the foe, and took his long sleep. Capt. McIver, John Whaley and others dropped their guns exclaiming, "Lieutenant, I am wounded," poor fellows, brave men, resting peacefully. When we were leaving the field, one of the last cannon balls or shells fired at us at close range gave me a near call, a brave soldier fell on his face before me, only one step away, I turned to pass around him, when in an instant, Hendricks of Davidson's Company rushed in the place where the next step would have placed me, when a 6 pound ball passed through him. Frank Phillips and I turned him over; I asked him if he wanted to send any message to his mother, his only words were "give me water." We tenderly rested his head on his blanket roll to rest him, until the angel of death should bear his soul away. Such are the horrors of war. I could see his heart throbbing, his ragged lungs vibrating in tumultuous motions, had he not stepped in my place I should have been the victim. When we were ordered to rest for the night, I found only my tin cup and canteen missing, shot away, the leather strap which held them, and a Confederate flag given me by Miss Barnes of Harrodsburg, Kentucky, were lost in battle. Those young ladies were wealthy and beautiful, and gave some of us such splendid dinners. The little flag she had pinned on my hat, but it was gone. My friend Anderson Harris and I just before dark walked over a part of the battle ground, where we saw many cavalymen of the Union army, lying dead or wounded among our men. We were told that a regiment of Ohio Cavalry were cut off in our rear, and attempted to escape through our lines, and that none of them passed through in safety. And it did look so from what I saw. The Colonel was reported to have ridden over the ground, the last of his regiment to fall. Harris selected him a saddle, and I took a haversack filled with crackers and coffee: how good this food was, as it was the first we had had since a sweet potato early in the morning. This was a night of horrors. The woods were on fire, and we decided to go out, and look after the wounded, as a report was circulated that they were in danger of being burned alive. Men were soon put to work to cut down the trees, and we could hear thousands of axes cutting the trees and sharpening the branches to make obstructions in the way of charges from the enemy, which was expected the next day.

The next morning, Sunday, Sept. 20, we were ordered to move down the line to our right, where heavy firing was going on. We halted, and up rode General Longstreet, and with him on his staff, was Paton Manning of Mississippi; he was a graduate at the Georgia Military Institute at Marietta. Generals Hood and McLaws' divisions were with him from General Lee's army. We passed many dead and wounded, and one battery of many field pieces, where the horses were rearing and plunging, with no one to man the guns. All day we charged and fought, sometimes falling back; in the afternoon, what was left of our brigade was ordered to take a strong position on a hill, the enemy being armed with repeating rifles, breach loaders, something unusual at that time. I had charge of the color guard, and it was surprising what a splendid front and perfect line we presented, after such a terrible experience of the previous day. The rush we made met with little opposition, it was done so quickly, and many of our men, who had just been repulsed fell into ranks with us, waved their hats and cheered us. The trees were riddled with bullets. Just as we came up with Dent's Battery which was nearly surrounded by the enemy, I felt a terrible shock to my right foot as though struck by a severe blow from a board on the bottom of my foot. I could not walk, but with the aid of my sword hopped to a tree. I saw the bones had come through the shoe: taking out my knife I cut the shoe away, and took out the shattered bones. Colonel Finley came riding up to me, and asked if I was badly hurt. I told him if it was only a flesh wound, I would go on, but not to wait for me, my foot was ruined. The enemy was retreating, but the shot and shell were flying as thick as hail. An officer came riding by and I mounted behind him on his horse and rode a short distance. My friend Captain Harris came by and assisted me in mounting behind him on his horse, and reached the field hospital. The next morning we were taken to Dalton, Georgia. The wagons were filled with many desperately wounded soldiers, we were jostled and jolted over the worst and rockiest road I ever saw. The boys said the jolting hurt worse than the bullets. Captain Wm. Booth Malone and his brother Dr. Alfred Fitzgerald Malone, my cousins, were still with our company, and engaged in the battle of Missionary Ridge, where Dr. Malone who was our Second Lieutenant was wounded and taken prisoner, carried to Johnson's Island, on Lake Erie. Albert Hudson Muse another cousin was killed at Missionary Ridge, with his face to the foe, and his soldiers' clothes, woven at home from the threads of my mother's wedding dress, was his winding sheet. When we reached Dalton, some of the men who could walk broke into a deserted hotel, built a fire, and tenderly assisted the helpless in, and here we slept on the floor. The next morning this room looked as if a battle had been fought in it. The next morning a train came along and put me off in Marietta, Ga. Here one of my old classmates at the G. M. I. secured me a room in the officers' ward. Several days after some of the doctors or surgeons performed an operation which leaves me a cripple for life. The chloroform and pine top whiskey came near killing me, I became emaciated, and lost my appetite. One day Mrs. Dr. Allen came to see me and brought me some wholesome food which saved my life. Professor Mange, our teacher in French, came to see me, and the good man wept and told me of so many of his boys who had been slain. He was at the battle of Waterloo with Napoleon and a most interesting conversationalist, with a tender heart. My father came to nurse me at Marietta, and took me home as soon as I was able to travel, riding a hundred miles in a stage coach, for the railroads were all torn up. My father was not well, and the fatigue of this trip told sadly on him.

Lieutenant John Wood Malone¹ of the 8th Florida Regiment, in Gen. Lee's army in Virginia, after passing through many battles was wounded at Gettysburg, Pa., and taken to Johnson's Island in Lake Erie. These cousins lived in the house with me and seemed as brothers. Of the seven going into the war from our old home, six returned, bearing the scars of war. I brought my sword home with me.

Your affectionate brother,

Wm. B. Forman.

MRS. ANNE ELIZABETH (FORMAN) DISMUKES.

Dr. Forman graduated at the Maryland Medical University in Baltimore, Maryland, in 1867; is still practicing surgery and medicine. He received a letter from Colonel Shipp, Superintendent of the Virginia Military Institute, stating that his name was among the number of cadets who were enrolled as graduates, "who were in good standing and well advanced when ordered to take up arms and fight in defense of their homes and firesides."

Dr. Forman is a member of the City Council at Sneads, Jackson Co., Florida.

"In April, 1861, at the call of the state, the Corps of Cadets, under the command of Major—afterwards Lieutenant General—Jackson, marched for Richmond. These cadets were employed in instructing and drilling the large number of volunteers assembled for organization and instruction in Camp Lee, near Richmond, but were soon disorganized and scattered by the advancement of cadets to military rank in the different grades of service."

WILLIAM RAYMOND FORMAN.

14. William Raymond Forman, son of Francis and Anne E. Forman, was born in Baltimore, Maryland, 1817. Just after leaving college he went on a visit to his brother, Arthur, who was living in Quincy, Gadsden Co., Florida. The Seminole Indian War was just breaking out. Judge Charles Henry Du Pont was raising a company of troops of which he was made captain. William Forman enlisted and remained in the army until the close of the war. About twenty miles from Quincy, Mr. Greene Chairs' family were attacked by the Indians, whilst they were at the supper table. Mrs. Chairs was the only member of the family who escaped. She fled through the back door, and stooping low in a cotton field, with a black cloak around her, often narrowly escaped the touch of an Indian's hand, which would have meant certain death. William R. Forman died comparatively a young man, leaving one son, Arthur Thomas Forman, who was admitted to the bar in Baltimore, Md., and is a practicing lawyer.

20. "Died Feb. 17, 1840, at the residence of his son Edwin Forman in Worcester Co., Md., the Rev. John Forman of the Protestant Episcopal church, aged 66."⁶

Rev. John Forman became the minister of St. Michael's parish, in Talbot Co., Md., in 1815. He was a native of Kent Co., born 1773. He was educated at Washington College, Chestertown, and in 1792 was a teacher in mathematics there. He then studied law, but on his marriage (to a Miss Jones) he settled on a farm where he continued until her death in 1811. He then turned his attention to the ministry, and gave notice, Sept. 2, 1812, that he would apply for orders. He studied for the ministry under the directions of Rev. Geo. Dashiell, then of St. Peter's, Baltimore, and was ordained deacon by Bishop Claggett, Aug. 3, 1814, when 41 years old. Before the next convention, May, 1815, he had come to St. Michael's parish. He had been elected for two years.

After his marriage he devoted himself a good deal to his farming pursuits in Worcester, but preached pretty regularly at St. James chapel in All Saints parish, and was on friendly terms with his neighbors and acquaintances.

In 1830 he removed to (and had charge of) All Hallows parish in Anne Arundel Co., but two years later he returned to Worcester, where he died in the winter of 1840. In announcing his death to the convention, Dr. Wyatt (Pres. of the convention) said: "... his active mind led him to the attainment of much and varied knowledge . . . but infirm health and growing years had for a long time caused him to retire from parochial duties."

The descendants of Rev. John Forman are still living in Worcester Co., Md.

SWEATNAM. (Maryland.)

¹Arms: Ar on a bend vert three spades of the fields, blade sa.

²Crest: a porcupine's head erased az. guttee d'ean. armed and collared or.

The above arms are those of the family of Swettenham, of Cheshire, England, from which the Maryland family of Sweatnam descends. In Maryland Records the name is variously written: Swettenham, Swetenham, Swetnam, Sweatnam, (the latter spelling being the one in general use.)

William Sweatnam, who came in 1675, was not a brother of Richard and Edward.⁶

By the "Act of Settlement" every man coming to Maryland "to inhabit" could claim fifty acres for himself and fifty acres for each person whom he transported. The original Record of these persons and the Land Warrant given them is in the Land Office in Annapolis and constitutes what is known as the "Early Settlers Lists."

The entry concerning Richard Sweatnam in this Record is as follows:⁷

"Richard Sweatnam of St. Marie's County proved then his rights to two hundred acres of land for transporting himself and Mary, his wife, John, his son, and Jonas Screws, into this province to inhabite.

p v d before me Willi Calvert.

"I doe hereby assign over unto Mr. Nic painter his heirs and assigns the above four rights to land: witness my hand 20th September, 1677.

Rich. Sweatnam."

From St. Mary's, Richard Sweatnam removed to Talbot Co., on the Eastern Shore of Maryland (then including the present county of Queen Anne's) and seems to have been there a wealthy and prominent man. In the year 1689 the name "Richard Sweatnam" is signed to "The Address of the Justices of the County of Talbot to the King";⁸ and in the same year he was one of the gentlemen appointed "for regulating the Affairs of the Militia in Talbot County." On the faded yellow page of the old Record is the following commission:

"Mr. Richard Sweatnam, Capt. of a foote Company in the roome of Capt. Kennimon."⁹ ¹Berry's Cyclopedia Heraldica. ²Fairbairn's Crests. ³"Early Settlers," Annap. ⁴Lib. 15, 553; Lib. 15, 425. ⁵Lib. 17, fol. 611; Lib. 15, 330. ⁶Adm. Accts. (Annap.), Lib. XVIII., A. 16. ⁷Lib. 15, 553. ⁸Maryland Archives, vol. 8, p. 143. ⁹By this service a descendant of Capt. Rich'd Sweatnam is rendered eligible to "The Soc. of Colonial Wars," "The Md. Soc. of Colonial Dames," &c.

By grant and purchase Capt. Sweatnam acquired large tracts of land, and at his death in 1697 he divided between his sons, John and William, over five thousand acres. To John was devised "Royston" (at that time 1200 acres) part of which was inherited by his daughter Elizabeth, and was for many years the home of a branch of the Forman family. On part of a tract of land devised by Capt. Sweatnam to his son William was afterwards built the present town of Centreville,¹ the county seat of Queen Anne's. This tract was known as "Chesterfield," and lay on the south side of Chester River and north side of Corsica Creek.

In 1727 (Nov. 7) William Sweatnam's daughter (Esther Banbury, a widow.) leased the tract to Matthew Mason; for the first year the rent was to be "one pepper corn," afterwards "for nine years 600 pounds of tobacco annually." Chesterfield afterwards passed into the ownership of the Nicholson family. "The grist mill situated on Chesterfield was known as Chester Mill (which was the name first used for the County seat, Centreville being substituted for it in 1789). The town was not built as early as was proposed. In the Minutes of Assembly of 1707 is the following:

"April 1, 1707 . . . Resolv'd, a Towne be erected on the land of Mr. William Sweatnam in Coursivall (Corsica) Creek in Chester River." . . . This town was afterwards abandoned, but the presumption is warranted that the location of the proposed town was at or near the present town of Centreville. Varying county lines threw the Sweatnam and Forman estates into the counties of Kent and Queen Anne's (cut from Talbot in 1706) as well as in Talbot, and the Records of all of these counties must be referred to in following the transfers &c., of Capt. Sweatnam's landed estate. "Royston," lying on the south side of Chester River was in Queen Anne's Co.

Capt. Richard Sweatnam married a second time, after his arrival in Maryland; the name of his second wife was "Jane," but her surname is not recorded nor is it known whether she had children.

A few extracts from the old Records may be of interest to the descendants of Capt. Richard Sweatnam, and are therefore made and here given.

³⁴License granted to Capt. Richard Sweatnam of Talbot County to keep ordinary at Talbot Court House⁴ for the entertainment and Accommodation of the Justices of the said Court and other persons officers and Sutors thereunto he being a person of Sufficient ability and duely qualified for the same."

Captain Richard Sweltenham, the immigrant, came from Cheshire, England, to the Eastern Shore of Maryland in 1677. He was a wealthy and a prominent man.

He was in the service of the King of England, during the second period of the reign of the House of Stuart, when Charles the Second, son of Charles the First, was on the throne, from 1660 to 1685. He entertained the King's officers, and held many places of high trust. He was Captain of a Foote Company, with a commission direct from the King. He owned five thousand acres of land at the time of his death, 1697.

In the year 1689, the name of Captain Richard Sweatnam is signed to the "Address of the Justices of the County of Talbot to the King." The Talbot County referred to is in Maryland; and the King, William the Third. James the Second, second son of Charles the First had abdicated in 1688. Richard Sweatnam had served the Commonwealth, Charles the First, James the Second, Charles the Second, and then in 1688, William the Third, Prince of Orange. These services to his own country and in the provinces entitle his descendants to become eligible to the "Society of Colonial Wars," and the "Maryland Society of Colonial Dames."

Captain Richard Sweatnam left two sons, John and William. John Sweatnam died leaving no son, only two daughters. William Sweatnam died in 1720.

leaving no sons, only two daughters. The two brothers died comparatively young. Thus passed away a name borne by a noble family: leaving a void never to be filled!

The Mr. Hans Hanson mentioned was the ancestor of Miss Jeannett Hanson, who married Mr. Gibson, a man of great intelligence and learning, a resident of Washington City, D. C. He died of yellow fever in St. Josephs, on the Gulf coast of Florida, about the year 1840, when that town was practically depopulated by this epidemic. Mrs. Gibson moved to Quincy, Florida, and was an intimate neighbor and friend of Hon. Arthur I. Forman. Some of her descendants are still living in the old home in Quincy, Florida.

FAMILY OF HON. ELBERT E. FARMAN.

37. William Forman settled in Maryland in the latter part of the 17th century. Michael Stuppel and Stephen Bernerd of London, mariners, received a warrant for 1750 acres on account of the transportation of 35 persons into the colony to inhabit, among whom was "Wm. Forman." It was conjectured for some time that William was the son of Robert who immigrated in 1674, but the discovery of a deed dated Feb. 8, 1733, to James Calder, in which it is stated that William, the son of Robert, died without issue, shows that the father of the William in question is still to be sought for. There is no evidence of his descent from Robert of Long Island. William's son Joseph, b. Oct. 17, 1699, d. May 6, 1753, had a son John, b. Sept. 16, 1739. John Foreman, as his name seems to have been spelled, volunteered for the French War at the age of sixteen. After serving in the army for eight years, he with two companions settled in New Hampshire in 1763. Soon afterwards he married and settled in the town of Bath on the Connecticut River. He had nine sons and died in 1792. During his residence in Bath the spelling of the family name was changed from Foreman to Farman, to which latter spelling all but one branch of his descendants have adhered. A representative of this branch of the family is Mr. F. W. Forman of Minneapolis. Roswell Farman, eldest son of John Foreman (or Farman), b. 1765, removed in 1805 from Bath to Oneida Co., N. Y., and a year later to Oswego Co. Zadok Farman, son of Roswell, b. 1791, married Martha Dix of Wethersfield, Conn., and had six children, the fifth of whom was Elbert Eli Farman, b. at New Haven, Oswego Co., N. Y., April 23, 1831.

Elbert E. Farman graduated at Amherst, 1855, taking the degree of M. A. three years later. He became a student of law at Warsaw, N. Y., and while still a student took an active part in the Fremont campaign of 1856. After his admission to the bar, he was for some years one of the owners and the business manager of the Western New Yorker of Warsaw, which developed into the leading Republican journal of that part of the State. In 1865, Mr. Farman went to Europe and spent two years in the study of criminal, international and civil law at Heidelberg and Berlin, and in learning the French and German languages. On his return to the United States he was appointed by the Governor as District Attorney of Wyoming County, an office which he held with much credit for seven years. In 1876 Mr. Farman was appointed Consul General at Cairo, Egypt, by President Grant. During the five years that Mr. Farman was Consul General he performed the duties of his office in the most painstaking and efficient manner. He also took an interest in the welfare of the people of Egypt, and through his efforts at various times fifteen slaves received their freedom. During the visit of General Grant to Egypt, Mr. Farman presented the General to the Khedive and otherwise took a prominent part in his reception. The obelisk in Central Park in New York City was obtained through the exertions of Mr. Farman, and the "Farman Collections" of Egyptian antiquities in the Metropolitan Museum were collected and classified by him. He was appointed on July 1, 1881, by President Garfield to the position of Judge of the International Court of Egypt, which office he filled with credit to himself and the United States until his resignation in 1884. On leaving Egypt he received from the Khedive the order of the Medjidieh. In 1882 Amherst College conferred upon him the degree of LL. D.

Genealogy of the Forman Family of Monmouth County, New
who died in 1671.

INTRODUCTION.

38. By far the most thorough researches that have been made in the history of this family were made by Mr. William Henry Forman of New York City, to whom credit is due for the information here presented proving that the Forman family of Monmouth Co., New Jersey, is descended from Robert Forman, an Englishman who settled in Long Island and died in 1671. To Mr. George W. Cocks, of Glen Cove, Long Island, is due much of the information as to the Long Island descent.

Something should be said in regard to the theory that the family is descended from John Foreman, a Scotch covenantor, said to have come over as a refugee from persecution. Mr. William Henry Forman found the facts in regard to John Foreman to be as follows—some two hundred persons, among whom was John Foreman, were brought from Scotland to New Jersey, in September, 1685, in the ship Henry & Francis to be bound out as servants by way of punishment for refusing to swear allegiance to James II. Their refusal was due to the fact that the King was a Roman Catholic, and they thought it a sin to take the oath of allegiance to a Roman Catholic. The privilege of binding out these people as servants for a term of years was obtained by George Scot, laird of Pitlochrie, as compensation for the expense of transporting them. Pitlochrie had also an interest in East Jersey. On the voyage which was long and stormy, ship fever broke out, and some seventy of those on board died. Among those that died were Pitlochrie and his wife. On the arrival of the vessel at Perth Amboy in December, 1685, the unwilling passengers appealed to the courts for their freedom on the ground that the only person who had power to bind them, to-wit: Pitlochrie, had died. They were granted their liberty, and John Foreman settled at Woodbridge, as the town records show, distant but a few miles from Perth Amboy. At Woodbridge, which is in Middlesex Co., John Foreman passed the rest of his life and died. In the town book are recorded the name and date of birth of each child of the inhabitants. It shows that John Foreman had no sons, his only children being daughters. He died intestate, and letters of administration were granted to his wife and daughter. The authorities for the foregoing statement are, in addition to the records of Woodbridge, Wodrow's History of the Sufferings of the Church of Scotland from the Restoration to the Revolution, and Whitehead's History of Perth Amboy.

In compiling this part of the work help has been afforded by the following ladies and gentlemen: Mrs. Catherine P. Byrnes, of Claiborne Co., Miss.; Miss Mary Forman Day, of Baltimore Co., Md.; Miss Martha R. Dye, of New York City; Mrs. Robert Edmonds, of Fauquier Co., Va.; Mrs. C. S. Fairchild, of New York City; Miss Estella Forman, of Austinburg, Ohio; Mrs. Hannah C. Forman, of Chicago; Miss Mary Forman and Miss Sarah Forman, of Mason Co., Ky.; Mr. Peter Forman, of Manalapan, N. J.; Mr. Richard Howell Forman, of Fayette, Miss.; Mr. W. S. Forman, of Springville, Ala.; Mr. Marion H. Henderson, of Elizabeth, N. J.; Mrs. J. C. Humphreys, of Mason Co., Ky.; Major W. P. McDowell, Louisville, Ky.; Mrs. Louisa D. Merrill, of Austinburg, Ohio; Mrs. John Moses, of Trenton, N. J.; Mr. W. M. Paxton, of Platte City, Mo.; Miss F. F. Randolph, of Freehold, N. J.; Mr. T. F. Screven, of Savannah, Ga., and the late Miss Anna M. Woodhull, of Freehold. To these names should be added that of Mr. George W. Cocks, of Glen Cove, Long Island, who has an extensive and minute acquaintance with the early Long Island records.

NOTE ON PRONUNCIATION OF THE NAME.

The true original English pronunciation of the name is stated by Mr. William Henry Forman, of New York City, to be as if it were spelled Furman, and this pronunciation is still retained in parts of England, in Queens and Westchester counties, N. Y., in New Jersey to some extent, and in Mason Co., Ky. Elsewhere in the United States the name is generally pronounced as if spelled Foreman. A better way would be, perhaps, to pronounce the first syllable as it is generally pronounced when it occurs in other words.

THE ENGLISH GENEALOGY.

39. It is regretted that authority can not be furnished for the English origin of the family as traced by Mr. William Henry Forman, from whom the following account was obtained.

The earliest ancestor from whom he is able to trace the descent of the family is William Forman of Gainsborough, Lincolnshire.

William Forman is mentioned in Holinshed's Chronicle as the father of Sir William Forman, Lord Mayor of London, 1538-39; also Member of Parliament.

To resist the threatened invasion of England by the Emperor of Germany and the King of France, Henry VIII. issued commissions to various prominent persons to raise troops. One of these commissions was issued to Sir Wm. Forman. He made the greatest muster of Londoners that had been made up to that time. When they were fully organized and drilled, he led them in long procession to Westminster, where they were reviewed by the King, his chief councillors, and the leading nobility, in the presence of a vast concourse of spectators. There were three divisions of 5000 men each, all bravely apparelled and well-armed, exclusive of pioneers and attendants.

"Musters of the citizens were frequent in the reigns of Henry the Eighth and Queen Elizabeth. A history of the muster of the citizens on the 8th of May, 1539, the 31st of Henry the Eighth, is given at length in the 'Records of the Corpora"tion" Journal 14, folio 165. They marched from Mile End to Whitehall, and from "thence to Leadenhall. Sir William Forman, Knt., Lord Mayor, was in bright

 "harness, whereof the curass, the maynsers, gauntelets and other parts were gilt
 "upon the crest and bordures, and with that he had a coat of black velvet with a "rich cross embroidered, and a great massy chain of gold about his neck, and on "his head a cap of black velvet with a rich jewel, he had a goodly jennett richly
 "trapped, with embroidery of gold set upon crimson velvet. About him attended
 "4 foot men, all apparellled in white satin hose and all puffed out with white
 "sarcenet." (Analytical Index to the Remembrancia, page 230, note.)

Sir William Forman left several sons, of whom the eldest, William, was for a time a merchant in London but subsequently retired to an estate which he purchased in Lincolnshire.

William Forman, son of the Lord Mayor, had several sons, one of whom was named Robert.

Robert Forman had several sons, one of whom named William became a clergyman and was a vicar in Buckinghamshire.

The Rev. William Forman, who, as will be readily seen, was great-grandson of Sir William, the Lord Mayor, had several sons, of whom one was Robert Forman. Robert's religious opinions were not in accord with those of the then dominant party in the English Church, and in order to escape persecution, Robert Forman left England and settled at Flushing (Vlissingen), Holland. From Holland he came to America.

OTHER 16TH AND 17TH CENTURY FORMANS IN ENGLAND.

40. A letter from the Bishop of Lincoln to Cardinal Wolsey, is printed in "Original Letters Illustrative of English History," with notes by Sir Henry Ellis, published by Bentley of London, 1846; this letter states that Rev. Thomas Forman, D. D., appears to have received heretical books. A foot-note, vol. 2, p. 78, states that Thomas Forman, D. D., was instituted to the Rectory of Allhallows, Honey-Lane, Feb. 7, 1524. He died in 1528.

From the article by Mr. S. L. Lee on Simon Forman, the astrologer, in the Dictionary of National Biography, we learn that Richard Forman, the grandfather of Simon, was Governor of Wilton Abbey. After Henry VIII. granted the Abbey to Sir William Herbert, later Earl of Pembroke, Richard Forman held some position in the park. He died in 1556. His son William, born 1524 at Quidhampton, Wiltshire, d. 1564, was page to Lord Willoughby. In 1544 he married Mary, daughter of John and Marianna (Hallam) Foster. They had eight children, the fifth son was Simon, born at Quidhampton 1552, d. 1611. Mr. Lee states that Simon Forman claimed connection with Sir William Forman, Lord Mayor of London, and with Sir George Forman, K. B., 1485, &c. Simon Forman wrote various works, among which was one on "Matters of Arms and Gentility Belonging to his Family," which is not known to have been printed. His autobiography written in 1600 has been printed. He there states that Richard Forman, his grandfather, was the son of Sir Thomas Forman of Leeds, who was the son of another Sir Thomas Forman of Furnival. The children of William and Marie (or Marianna) Foster Forman were: 1, William; 2, Jone (or Joan), m. William Hannom, gentleman, son of the Mayor of Sarum, m. 2ndly, William Brincke, both marriages were without children; 3, Henry, m. Ann, dau. of Thomas Harte, issue dau. Ann; 4, Richard, m. 1st, Cicely Parlet, sole heir of John Parlet, m. 2nd, Joan Warner, issue 3 children: John, Dorothy and Richard; 5, Simon (the astrologer); 6, Robert, m. Joan, dau. of Stephen Pore, gentleman, of Dorsetshire; 7, Joan; 8, John, d. Dec. 12, 1601.

The Autobiography says: "And it is recorded in ancient bookes that ther "ar three things specially noted in the name of the Formans, that is, ther was never "any of them proud, covetous, nor a traitor: and that may welbe seen to this daie "in the generation."

Simon Forman is frequently referred to in literature, in The Epicene, Act. IV., Scene 1: The Devil is an Ass, Act I., Scene 2, by Ben Jonson, and in The Strange Story by Bulwer.

Andrew Forman, of Scotland, Archbishop of St. Andrews, was the son of the laird of Hutton in Berwickshire. He was one of the most prominent ecclesiastical personages of the period in which he lived, and took part in political as well as church affairs. A good account of his life is given in the Dictionary of National Biography, also in the Scottish Nation, published by Anderson in London, 1853. Archbishop Andrew Forman died in 1521, and was buried at Dunfermline.

Various members of the Forman family in America, in particular General Thomas Marsh Forman of Cecil Co., Md., and General Jonathan Forman of Cazenovia, New York, have used the arms ascribed by Sir Bernard Burke to the Forman family of Lincolnshire. In addition they have used a lion's (or leopard's) head as a crest, and the motto "Deo et Amicitiae."

Mr. Wm. Henry Forman used a coat-of-arms which was used by his father, grandfather and great grandfather before him. It corresponds in all respects, even to the crest, to that used by the Lord Mayor, which differs but slightly from the Lincolnshire coat-of-arms.

The American Genealogy.

ROBERT FORMAN.

12. Robert Forman was driven from England by the persecution of Archbishop Laud and took refuge in Holland. His name and that of his wife are enrolled upon the church register at Vlissingen, Holland, of which the English name is Flushing. Coming to America, he was one of the 18 incorporators of the town of Flushing on Long Island, in 1645. Long Island was then governed by the Dutch, but the incorporators of Flushing were Englishmen. The charter, which is at Albany, but is printed in Mr. Waller's History of the town of Flushing (1899) has Robert's name spelled "Firman" but in all documents signed by him it is spelled "fforman." Robert Forman removed from Flushing to Hempstead, Long Island, (incorporated November 16, 1645). His name appears among the 43 signers of a letter to Governor Stuyvesant agreeing to pay the "tenths" demanded by the Governor, if it can be shown that they are legally obliged to do so (Colonial Docs., New York State Historical Publications, Vol. 14, page 362). Out of the names of four persons submitted, Governor Stuyvesant on Dec. 9, 1658, chose to be magistrates at Hempstead, Mr. Richard Gildersleeve and Mr. Robert Forman (same records). On May 12, 1664, Robert Forman was appointed as one of two magistrates of Oyster Bay, then under the rule of the English colony of Connecticut, that part of Long Island east of a straight line running from the westernmost part of Oyster Bay to the sea having come under New England jurisdiction in 1650. Robert Forman's will is dated February 7, 1670 (Records of Town of Oyster Bay, Liber 1, page 239),¹ and mentions sons, Moses, Aaron and Samuel, but no daughter. He died in 1671. That his wife's name was Johanna is indicated by the signature "Johanna Forman" as the only witness to a deed from Robert to his sons Samuel and Moses, (Liber 1, page 11) June 9, 1665.

WILL OF ROBERT FORMAN.

February 7th, 1670.

Ye last will and testament of Robert fforman of Oyster Bay. I being weak in body, yet being in perfect memory and understanding, do desire of my estate as followeth, viz: First, I give to my loving wife my house, barn and orchard, and home lot, and the meadow at Matinecock, and all ye hollow at ye Plain Edge, and a hollow on ye Brushy Plains for my wife to dispose of as she see best for her comfortable subsistence, while she liveth, and if my son Aaron will undertake this for his mother, my will is that he shall do it, and improve ye aforesaid house and land for her, before any other, and at my wife's decease, ye above mentioned house and land to be my son Aaron's—to him and his [heirs] forever.

Secondly. I give to my two sons Samuel and Moses all of ye remainder of my accommodation, both of meadows at ye south and mowable land upon ye plains, to be equally divided betwixt them, and in particular, I give to my son Samuel all my housing and land at ye Cold Spring, after my wife's decease, provided always ye agreement formerly made betwixt my two sons Samuel and Moses at my wife's decease shall stand.

Thirdly. I give to my loving wife all my personal estate, both of living stock and household goods to her proper use and behoof, for her comfort and to dispose of at her decease; and my will is that my two sons shall during their mother's life, provide yearly, hay and what else is needful for ye maintaining their mother's stock of cattle. This is my will, as witness my hand in presence of

Jonas Wood,

Ab— Frost.

Robert Forman.

Note: The record of the will spells the name with a u, but it has been deemed proper to print the signature spelled as Robert Forman spelled his name in all his known signatures.

This will was probated at Jamaica, Long Island, at June session, 1671, and the widow was allowed to be executrix.

The record of the inventory of the widow Johanna Forman's estate is dated June 6, 1672, and was made by the Constable and Overseers of Oyster Bay. It is a curious document and gives the household goods in great detail. The total valuation is ninety-one pounds, ten shillings, threepence: money at that date being more valuable than at present, the modern value would be much greater. The live stock mentioned are two mares valued at ten pounds, one horse five pounds, two oxen twelve pounds, two five-year old steers twelve pounds, two cows eight pounds, one two-year and one yearling heifer four pounds, two calves one pound. It would not be interesting to describe the pigs, farming and kitchen utensils and household goods in detail. A Bible valued at 12 shillings is set down, and would be now the most valuable article in the inventory if it contained a family record. There are also "one doublet breeches & cote" valued together at 30 shillings, "a gun 2 Swordes" one pound ten shillings, and a three-year old bull three pounds. In addition, the lands, housing, orchards and meadows at Matinecock are estimated to be worth three pounds a year in current pay of the colony. The document was signed by Thomas Townsend, Richard Harcott, Matthew Harvey and Nicholas Wright.

AARON FORMAN.

47. Aaron Forman, son of Robert, must have been born not later than 1637, for he, with others at Hempstead, was summoned to answer the complaint of the farmer of excise on Dec. 19, 1658, when he could not have been less than twenty-one years old (calendar of Dutch MSS., N. Y. State Hist. Pubs., Vol. 4, page 204). He was townsman of Hempstead in 1660. He was residing at Oyster Bay in 1683. On April 8, 1687, he conveyed land at Oyster Bay to his son Aaron Jr. The deed is witnessed by Dorothy and Alexander Forman, although they are not named therein, showing that these were the names of his wife and of another son, Alexander (Records of Oyster Bay, Liber 2, page 194). It was the custom when wife and son of a grantor were willing to be bound by a deed, for them to sign the deed simply, without being named therein. Aaron Forman removed to Monmouth Co., New Jersey, before April 11, 1693: the date of a deed in which he is described as of the County of Monmouth and Province of East Jersey, planter, and by which he conveys land at Oyster Bay to "my son Alexander Forman, which lands were granted unto me, Aaron Forman by a gift of my father, Robert Forman." (Records of Oyster Bay, Liber 3, page 277). This deed is signed by Dorothy Forman, Aaron Forman, Jr., and Samuel Forman, although they are not named therein, showing that Aaron had also a son Samuel. Moreover, Alexander Forman conveyed Dec. 11, 1695, (Liber 2, page 152), lands at Oyster Bay to John Rogers, adding, "these lands did formerly belong to my brother, Samuel Forman." Samuel Forman, described as "of Springtown in the County of Monmouth and Province of East New Jersey, in America, planter," had conveyed these lands to Alexander Forman on April 11, 1693, (Liber B, page 278). Aaron had also a son Thomas, as is shown by a deed dated June 3, 1690 (Liber 3, page 40) wherein Thomas Forman of Jerusalem in East New Jersey in America conveys to Thomas Youngs of Oyster Bay, land which "was formerly my brother Aaron Forman's land." Among the deeds of Freehold, New Jersey, is one from Samuel Forman to Thomas Forman, May 1699: Samuel of town of Freehold and Mary his wife and Thomas Forman my loving brother of same town, both yeomen. Thomas married Mary Allen, whose marriage certificate or license (May 24, 1695) is in the possession of the New Jersey Historical Society.

SAMUEL FORMAN.

48. Samuel Forman, son of Aaron and Dorothy and grandson of Robert, was born in 1662 or 1663, and, as has been stated, removed to Monmouth Co., New Jersey, as did his brothers Thomas and Alexander. The names of the three appear among the signatures to a Remonstrance of the Inhabitants of East Jersey to the King against the Acts of the Proprietors, and asking for a competent Governor, which was sent to the Proprietors, Nov. 16, 1700. (Archives of N. J., vol. II, p. 322.) On Nov. 29, 1695, Samuel was commissioned High Sheriff of Monmouth Co., by Gov. Andrew Hamilton. (Commissions, Acts of Assembly &c., Book C, p. 235, at State House, Trenton). His name is misspelled "fforeman" in the Commission, and is also misspelled in vol. II., p. 363 of the Archives, where he is mentioned among the people who seized and kept under guard the Governor, Justices, Attorney General, and other officials from a Tuesday to the following Saturday, in March, 1701, the occasion being that they were resisting the trial of one of the people who was accused of piracy. No will of Samuel Forman has been found, but his place in the family is well determined otherwise. The tombstone of his youngest son records that Ezekiel Forman was the son of Samuel and Mary; and in a deed dated January 16, 1725, Samuel Forman, late High Sheriff of Monmouth Co., conveys certain lands in that county to his son, Captain John Forman, and there is a deed to his son Aaron in 1719, besides other proof.

Samuel Forman married Mary Wilbur of Providence, Rhode Island, who was the daughter of Samuel Wilbur, Jr., and Hannah Porter, who was the daughter of John Porter, a prominent man in both Massachusetts and Rhode Island. Samuel Wilbur, Jr., was the son of Samuel Wilbur, Senior, who came from England to Massachusetts with his three sons and his wife, Ann Bradford, the daughter of Thomas Bradford, who was the uncle of Governor William Bradford of the Mayflower.

The inscription on Samuel Forman's tombstone is:

Here lieth the Body of Samuel Forman who died ye 13th day of October 1740
in ye 78th year of his Age

His wife's tombstone is broken, and reads:

..... Body of mary Forman wife of Samuel Forman who died ye 13th day of march 1728 in ye 62^d
year of her Age

These tombs with those of Hannah Madock and Rebecca Van Cleef, their daughters, and of their son Capt. John Forman, and of another son Aaron and his wife Ursula, all are situated on a hill about a mile and a half N. E. of Freehold, Monmouth Co., New Jersey. This eminence has been called of late years "Wyckoff Hill," because on the farm of Mr. Charles Wyckoff (whose wife is a great-granddaughter of Sheriff David Forman, hereafter to be mentioned). This hill (which commands a view of beautiful farms) and all the surrounding country belonged for two hundred years to High Sheriff Samuel Forman and his descendants.

The eldest son of High Sheriff Samuel Forman, also named Samuel, removed to Rhode Island. He is not known to have left any children. There were five other sons: Jonathan, Aaron, John, Joseph and Ezekiel, accounts of whom will be given under separate headings with their descendants.

DESCENDANTS OF JUDGE JONATHAN FORMAN, SECOND SON.

51. Jonathan Forman (1688-1762) was a prosperous farmer and Judge of the Court of Common Pleas, Monmouth Co., 1745. He and his wife, Margaret Wyckoff, are buried at the "Old Scots" burying ground four miles from Freehold in a N. E. direction. It was at the "Old Scots" church that the first Presbytery formed in America, the Philadelphia Presbytery, convened on Dec. 29, 1706, and ordained the Rev. John Boyd, the first known pastor of this church. There was, it is said, a prior meeting of the Presbytery, but this meeting is the first of which record exists.

ABSTRACT OF WILL.

"In the Name of God, Amen. The Twentieth day of June, in the Year of our Lord, One Thousand Seven hundred and fifty-nine, I, Jonathan Forman of Freehold, in the County of Monmouth, and Province of New Jersey, Esqr. The late Judge William P. Forman of Manalapan, N. J., stated in his little book that in the account book of Judge Jonathan Forman (his great-great-grandfather) is the following record under date of April 29, 1729: "Then weighed the old iron and nails of the court house and jail, the old court house and jail having been burned down, per John Little, Esq., and Jonathan Forman. Weight of iron 320 pounds, and nails 84 pounds." In the same book are included accounts of Peter Forman (great-grandfather of Judge William P. Forman) after his father's decease. "It seems they were owners of a large tract of timber land in what is called the Forman neighborhood, and that they carried on an extensive manufactory of flour barrels, which were in great demand at that time, as the book shows that many thousands were furnished to the flouring mills for considerable distances." A list of the owners of thirty-two mills then follows. Peter Forman was, it would appear from a small book owned by his descendant, treasurer of the old Tennent church which still stands on the Monmouth battlefield. "His report, May 29, 1755, shows that payment for the pews if not paid was to be on interest after May 1, 1753. This would seem to imply that the church was finished about the year 1753. The Formans were largely represented, and took nearly one-tenth of the pews: Samuel Forman and David Rhea took No. 10; Peter Forman, my great-grandfather, No. 11; Jonathan Forman, Esq., No. 24; Joseph Forman, No. 27; Lewis Forman, No. 43; John Forman, No. 18. My grandfather, William Forman, informed me some sixty years ago, that his father, Peter, led the singing in the church for some years after it was first used for public worship."

Judge Jonathan Forman's eldest son, Samuel, and youngest son, David, married daughters of Tennis Denise, a prominent man of a well known Long Island family. The six daughters of Tennis Denise married in Monmouth Co., and three of them married Formans. An account will later be given of Samuel, the eldest son of Judge Jonathan. He lived at Middletown Point, (now Matawan), and the house still stood in 1901.

Peter, the second son, was a Justice of the Peace at the time of the Revolution, as shown by his commission, signed by Gov. Livingston, which was in the possession of his great grandson, Judge William P. Forman. The latter printed in 1885, a little book on the family, which contains much interesting information, but gives a mistaken account of the origin of the family. Peter Forman was one of the pew holders in the old Tennent church of which others of the family were members.

David Forman, the youngest son of Judge Jonathan, was commissioned Sheriff Oct. 10, 1780, and with Peter Wyckoff acted as guide at the battle of Monmouth in 1778. He lived in the homestead which still exists, and stands about a mile and a half N. E. of Freehold. It is now the residence of Mr. Charles Forman, great-grandson of Sheriff David Forman. Sheriff David Forman and General David Forman were first cousins and intimate friends. A lady who is descended from the former writes: "Both being prominent men, to distinguish them the General was called 'Devil David,' because of his dauntless spirit and indomitable will, and Sheriff David was called 'Black David,' being of dark complexion and hair—the General was fair. This is contrary to all the statements I have seen in history (with one exception), but I have always understood that this is correct." From Sheriff David are descended most of the Formans who now live in Monmouth Co. He and his wife and the succeeding generations that lived in the country are buried at "Old Tennent" church.

GENERAL JONATHAN FORMAN.

54. General Jonathan Forman (1755-1809) was the eldest son of Samuel and Helena Denise Forman of Middletown Point, and grandson of Judge Jonathan and Margaret (Wyckoff) Forman. After serving as an officer in Heard's Militia Brigade, he became on Dec. 1, 1776, Captain in the New Jersey Continental Line, and served with distinction in the line throughout the war. He took part in Sullivan's expedition against the Six Nations to punish them for the massacre of Wyoming; was in Virginia under Lafayette; at Cornwallis' surrender at Yorktown; was promoted in November, 1781, from Captain to Major Third Regiment, New Jersey Line; and was placed in command of the battalion of light infantry in August, 1782; commanded successively posts at Dobbs Ferry, at Stony Point, and on the Croton River later in 1782; and was promoted to Lieut.-Colonel, Second Regiment, in February, 1783, and served until the close of the war. In June, 1783, he was elected Vice President of the New Jersey Branch of the Society of the Cincinnati at its organization. In 1794 he headed a regiment against the Whiskey Insurgents. He removed in 1796 from New Jersey to Cazenovia, New York, where he became Brigadier General in the militia and was a member of the legislature.

In 1796 central New York was a new country. It is said that "there was then no carriage road and in many places they were obliged to use axes to make their way in that direction. It is said that the carriage of Col. Forman was the first conveyance of the kind that passed beyond the site of Whitestown. He drove to Chittenango, and the family went thence to Cazenovia on horseback."

Jonathan Forman was a man of very attractive personality, of a warm and tender heart, and much beloved, as well as a good soldier. The family tradition is that at the time of the Whiskey Insurrection of 1794, Washington, who had not seen him for many years, said on meeting him just before the expedition started: "Colonel Forman, you are always first on the field of duty."

THE LEDYARD FAMILY.

Benjamin Ledyard who married Catherine Forman, and Mary Ledyard who married Gen. Jonathan Forman, were children of Youngs Ledyard and grandchildren of John Ledyard, an Englishman of good family and education who emigrated to America. A sketch of the family with a genealogy, written by Mr. John Austin Stevens, may be found in the Magazine of American History, volume 7.

Benjamin Ledyard was Major in McDougall's First New York Regiment in the Revolution. His first cousin, John Ledyard, was a well-known traveler, accompanied the celebrated Captain Cook on his last voyage, and wrote an account of the expedition. Col. William Ledyard who was killed at the taking of Fort Griswold in 1781 was Major Benjamin Ledyard's uncle.

GOVERNOR HORATIO SEYMOUR.

Horatio Seymour was the son of Henry Seymour and Mary Ledyard Forman, his wife. She was the daughter of Gen. Jonathan Forman. Governor Seymour was one of the most prominent men of his time and a volume would be required to give an account of his life. He was born at Pompey Hill, Onondaga Co., N. Y., May 31, 1810, was admitted to the bar in 1832 but never practiced. In 1841 he entered the legislature, becoming Speaker in 1845. He was Governor of New York 1853-1855 and again 1863-1865. In 1868 he was nominated for the Presidency by the Democratic party, but was defeated by Gen. Grant, the Republican candidate. He died at Utica Feb. 12, 1886.

He died March 28, 1832, in his 48th or 49th year. Children: two sons and four daughters, all of whom married, and there are many descendants.

3, Catherine Ledyard Freneau, unmarried.

4, Margaret Freneau, unmarried.

Note: The recent biography of Philip Freneau, the "Poet of the Revolution," by Miss Mary S. Anstin, gives many hitherto unknown facts in regard to his life, as well as much information as to his ancestry and descendants. Freneau's talents as a poet (which were considerable) were very valuable to the American cause. He saw some military service also, having been at the battle of Germantown, according to his brother-in-law, Major Samuel S. Forman. His name appears on page 465 of Gen. Stryker's roster of troops, and the "Monmouth Inquirer," quoted at page 208 of the biography, speaks of him as "a good soldier."

MAJOR SAMUEL S. FORMAN.

56. Samuel S. Forman, the youngest son of Samuel and Helena (Denise) Forman, was born at Middletown Point, (now Matawan) July 6, 1767 (or 1765). He accompanied his cousin Ezekiel Forman when the latter removed to the Natchez country in 1789, and in his later years wrote an account of the expedition, which was published in the Historical Magazine for December, 1869, with notes by Mr. Charles C. Dawson. In 1888 it was printed from a slightly different version, and abridged as a "Narrative of a Journey down the Ohio and Mississippi," in a small volume edited by Dr. Lyman C. Draper, who had apparently not seen the earlier appearance of the work. It is a very interesting account of travel in the then west, and is otherwise valuable. In the "Narrative," Major Forman refers to his cousin as "uncle" on account of the difference in their ages. In a private letter Major Forman stated that there were no less than twelve Samuel Formans living in Monmouth Co., at the same time—the latter part of the eighteenth century, and to avoid confusion each assumed the name of his father as a middle name.

At the commencement of the War of the Revolution, writes Major Forman, his father Samuel Forman was a merchant and owned a large landed estate, and took an active part in the defence of the country. As Middletown Point was as it were on the frontier of the enemy, he was very much harassed by them—the Tories making frequent depredatory incursions, and ransacked and plundered his house, burned his valuable mills and other buildings. He also suffered much by continental money. The eldest son of Samuel Forman was General Jonathan Forman, whose career already been described. Denise, the second son, was at the battle of Germantown, in the New Jersey militia, was later taken prisoner with Philip Freneau, on a privateer owned by the latter and remained a long time a prisoner on board a prison ship in New York harbor. He and Freneau were exchanged and were perfect skeletons when they returned home. Samuel Forman's youngest son was Samuel S., who could just remember the Tories running their bayonets through the feather beds in search of his father. Samuel S. Forman witnessed the evacuation of New York, by the British, Nov. 25, 1783, having gone to New York to enter the employ of the firm composed of his brother-in-law, Major Benjamin Ledyard, and Col. Benjamin Walker, who were engaged in the wholesale hardware and commission business, selling West India produce. Before he was 21, he he was sent to Charleston, S. C., as supercargo of a vessel loaded with flour. He acquitted himself so well of this task that his cousin Gen. David Forman engaged him to accompany Ezekiel Forman, the General's brother, on his journey to Natchez in 1789-90. After his return from Natchez, Major Forman witnessed in Philadelphia the second inauguration of President Washington. "In 1793," writes Mr. Dawson, "he engaged with Messrs. Cazenove and Lincklaen, agents of the Holland Land Co., to assist in disposing of the company's lands in New York, lying near the centre of the state. Large quantities of staple goods, farming implements, &c. were forwarded to the proposed new settlement, which was named by the Major, Cazenovia, in honor of one of his employers." He also named Delphi in the same county.

MRS. ELEANOR FORMAN HANKINSON
Daughter of William and Eleanor Winsor, sons Forman.

"Having organized a military company at Cazenovia, he was appointed by Gov. Jay Major of the regiment to which it was attached. He carried on a mercantile business at Cazenovia for many years, and held many places of private and public trust. He removed to Onondaga Co., about 1808, in which year he married Miss Sarah McCarty, of Salina. His only children were a son who died in infancy, and a daughter Mary Euphemia, who married Dr. Abraham Van Gaasbeck, of Syracuse, N. Y. Major Forman had an extensive acquaintance with public men, and was related by birth and marriage to many persons of distinction. He was a man of good conversational abilities, sound judgment, generous disposition, and fine social feelings. His mental faculties were retained in a remarkable degree to extreme old age." He died at his daughter's residence at Syracuse, August 18, 1862.

Mary Euphemia Forman, only child of Major Samuel S. Forman, married; first, Rensselaer van Rensselaer; second, Dr. A. van Gaasbeck. There were no children of either marriage.

JONATHAN CLAYTON FORMAN.

69. Jonathan Clayton Forman of Cleveland, Ohio, was born in Gorham, New York, in 1830. His father, Sammel W. Forman, who was born in New Jersey, removed to the then West, and died in Warren, Ohio, in 1875, aged 81. He was a man of great strength of character and much respected.

Jonathan C. Forman entered a printing office when quite young, and thoroughly mastered the business. In 1867 he was admitted to partnership with Sanford & Hayward, then the leading printers and bookbinders in Cleveland. In 1876 the establishment was purchased by Short & Forman. About November, 1890, a stock company was formed under the name of The Forman-Bassett-Hatch Company, of which Jonathan C. Forman is president. The business of the company is that of printers, lithographers, blank book manufacturers and stationers. Mr. Forman has invented a patent wave line appliance for ruling, which has met with much success, and is also the holder of many other patents for devices of his invention for economizing labor and beautifying work. He is a member of the Republican party and has rendered effective service to that organization, but has never sought political office, preferring to devote himself to his large business interests. He is a member of the Tippecanoe and Union Clubs of Cleveland.

DESCENDANTS OF SHERIFF DAVID FORMAN.

70. Sheriff David Forman left three sons, all prominent men in the late 18th and early 19th centuries, and all having grandchildren and great-grandchildren living in Monmouth Co. at the present time.

Jonathan Forman, Sheriff David's eldest son, married Hope Burrowes, sister of Major John Burrowes, of the Revolution. From this marriage, through their son, John Burrowes Forman, there is but one line, that of Mrs. Fitz Randolph, daughter of John Burrowes Forman, and widow of Bennington Fitz Randolph, who resides at Freehold with her two daughters and has two other daughters living. Of these, one is the widow of Governor Joseph D. Bedle, of New Jersey, the other is the widow of Flavel McGee, a prominent lawyer. Both these ladies reside with their families in Jersey City.

Tunis Forman, (1761-1837), second son of Sheriff David, married Eleanor Remsen. The story of his bravery during the Revolutionary war will be told later. In the male line, Tunis Forman is represented by a grandson, Mr. Edward T. Forman, of Brooklyn, and his son. Mr. Edward T. Forman is the son of Jonathan and Matilda (Scudder) Forman. Catherine Louisa Forman, the only daughter of Tunis, married Dr. Edward Taylor, of Middletown, Monmouth Co., N. J., and there are a number of descendants through this line, among whom is Dr. Edward Taylor, a prominent physician of Middletown, and a grandson of Tunis Forman.

Dr. Samuel Forman, (1764-184), the youngest son of Sheriff David Forman, was a noted physician at Freehold. By his second wife, Sarah Throckmorton, he left two sons, John Fisher Forman, and Richard. There are children and grandchildren of these now living in Freehold. Dr. D. McLean Forman, of Freehold, and his brother Dr. Samuel Randolph Forman, of Jersey City, (sons of John Fisher Forman), are prominent physicians in their respective places of residence. Dr. Samuel Forman, of Freehold, (the elder) had an only daughter Anne, who married Joseph FitzRandolph, uncle of Bennington FitzRandolph above mentioned. Theodore Fitz Randolph, who was Governor of New Jersey, 1869-72, was their cousin. The family of FitzRandolph is descended from Edward FitzRandolph, who came to Massachusetts in 1630. At the present time the prefix is commonly dropped.

The will of David Forman of Freehold,¹ dated Feb. 24, 1802, probated 1813, speaks of him as "being anshant"; it names "wife Nelle's sons Jonathan, Tunis and Samuel"; "daughter Ann Floyd"; "Jonathan's son David; Samuel's son David."

71. (Sheriff) David Forman, son of Jonathan and Margaret (Wyckoff) Forman, b. 1733, d. 1812. His commission as High Sheriff of Monmouth Co., Oct. 10, 1780, is in possession of the N. J. Historical Society.

TUNIS FORMAN.

74. The following incident from Barber and Howe's Historical Collections of New Jersey, p. 345, was incorporated by Judge Wm. P. Forman in his little book.

On a fine morning in May, 1780, as the family of Mr. David Forman, sheriff of the county, were at breakfast, a soldier almost out of breath suddenly burst into the room and stated that he and another soldier were conducting to the court house two men taken up on suspicion at Colt's Neck; they had knocked down his comrade, seized his musket and escaped. The sheriff, on hearing this relation, immediately mounted his horse and galloped to the court house to alarm the guard. His son Tunis, a lad of about seventeen, and small of his age, seized a musket loaded only with small shot to kill blackbirds in the corn-fields, and putting on a cartridge box, dispatched his brother Samuel upstairs for the bayonet, and then without waiting for it, hurried off alone in the pursuit.

After moving in a westerly direction about a mile he discovered the men sitting on a fence, who on perceiving him, ran into a swamp. As the morning was warm he hastily pulled off his coat and shoes and dashed in after them keeping close upon them for over a mile. When they got out of the swamp each climbed into separate trees. As he came up they discharged at him the musket taken from the guard. The ball whistled over his head, he felt for his bayonet, and at that moment perceived that in his haste it was left behind. He then pointed his gun at the man with the musket, but deemed it imprudent to fire, reflecting even if he killed him his comrade could easily master such a stripling as himself.

He compelled the man to throw down the musket by threatening him with death if he did not instantly comply. Then loading the prize from the cartridge box, he forced his prisoners down the trees, and armed with his two loaded muskets he drove them toward the court house, careful, however, to keep them far apart to prevent conversation. Passing by a spring they requested permission to drink. "No," replied the intrepid boy understanding their design, "you can do as well without it as myself; you shall have some by and by."

Soon after, his father at the head of a party of soldiers in pursuit, galloped passed in the road within a short distance. Tunis halloed, but the clattering of their horses' hoofs drowned his voice. At length he reached the village and lodged his prisoners in the county prison.

It was subsequently learned that these men, whose names were John and Robert Smith, were brothers from near Philadelphia: that they had robbed and murdered a Mr. Boyd, a collector of taxes in Chester county, and when taken were on their way to join the British. As they had been apprehended on suspicion, merely, of being refugees, no definite charge could then be brought against them.

A few days after, Sheriff Forman saw an advertisement in a Pennsylvania paper describing them, with the facts above mentioned, and a reward of $20,000 (continental money) offered for their apprehension. He, accompanied by his son, took them on there, where they were tried and executed. On entering Philadelphia Tunis was carried through the streets in triumph upon the shoulders of the military. In the latter part of the war, this young man became very active, and was the particular favorite of Gen. David Forman.

N. B.—This account was taken from the lips of Dr Samuel Forman, who was then the boy Samuel who was sent upstairs for the bayonet, and was related by him when the transactions in question were fresh in his mind.

Descendants of Aaron Forman (1699-1742), Third Son of High Sheriff
Samuel Forman of Monmouth.

75. Aaron Forman, b. May 22, 1699, married Ursula Craig, daughter of Archibald Craig, who is styled "Esq." on his tombstone at "Old Scots" burying ground. Archibald Craig died in 1751, and left a will, dated 1750, by which he left forty pounds to "my well-beloved daughter, widow Ursula Forman." Aaron Forman was a pewholder in the old Tennent Church. He died in 1742, and is buried at "Wyckoff Hill." His will dated Dec. 31, 1741, at Freehold, mentions his wife Ursula, his eldest son George, not of age at the time, also three other sons: Lewis, Andrew and Robert, and three daughters: Priscilla, Lydia and Phoebe—all minors; his wife Ursula, and his two brothers, Jonathan and John Forman, and brothers-in-law, Samuel Craig and William Madock, are appointed executors. Witnesses were Samuel Throckmorton and Ambrose Stelle. The will was probated Feb. 12, 1742 (1741, old style), (Liber C of Wills, p. 479, at State Capitol.)

Lewis Forman, son of Aaron and Ursula (Craig) Forman, was born and brought up in Monmouth Co., and removed to New Brunswick, New Jersey. Before his removal he was a pewholder in the Tennent Church. He was an ardent Loyalist during the Revolution. Lewis' son William—he had other sons—was born in New Brunswick, lived and died there. William had several sons, one of whom, Lewis, born in New Brunswick removed at the age of 17 to New York City to be with his uncle Aaron Forman, who was established there as a book publisher. The last named Lewis Forman, who died in New York in 1891, was the father of Mr. William Henry Forman of New York City, whose researches in the history of the family have been far more extensive and valuable than those of any previous investigator.

Descendants of Captain John Forman (1701-1748) Fourth Son of High Sheriff Samuel Forman of Monmouth Co., N. J.

76. Captain John Forman carried on the business of blacksmith at Freehold. He married Jane Wyckoff. John Forman (b. 1736) who married Eleanor Denise, daughter of Tunis Denise, is believed to be correctly identified as the eldest son of Captain John Forman. John Forman the younger, had a son Denise. Denise Forman, who must not be confused with his cousin of the same name, was the father of Mrs. Alice Forman, now living at Freehold, the widow of John Conover Forman, son of Tunis Forman the Revolutionary hero.

COLONEL SAMUEL FORMAN.

It is believed that the Samuel Forman, who was Colonel of the 2nd Regiment New Jersey militia in the Revolution was the son of Capt. John Forman. Colonel Samuel Forman was twice married. His first wife Anne, was born in County Kildare, 18 miles from Dublin, Ireland, on June 21, 1737, was married April 28, 1756, and died Oct. 12, 1770. Colonel Samuel Forman's second wife was Elizabeth, the only sister of General David Forman, his first cousin. They were married Oct. 22, 1772, she died Nov. 28, 1781. There were no children by either marriage. Col. Samuel and his two wives are buried under St. Peter's Episcopal church at Freehold. He was born Feb. 1, 1734. This and the other dates are from a stray leaf which has been preserved from his Bible.

Descendants of Joseph Forman (1703-1775), Fifth Son of High Sheriff
Samuel Forman of Monmouth Co., N. J.

77. Joseph Forman, according to the statement furnished to Miss Woodhull by his granddaughter, Miss Malvina Forman, in 1871, was a wealthy shipping merchant in New York City, afterwards retired from business, and settled on one of his farms in Monmouth Co., N. J. In a manuscript written in 1851 by Gov. John Chambers, a distinguished citizen of Kentucky who was Governor of Iowa Territory in 1841, it is stated: "My father in early manhood was sent to New York and was employed as a clerk in an extensive mercantile establishment belonging to Mr. Joseph Forman, who had married Betty Lee, my grandmother's sister. From your grandfather's account of Mr. Forman, who was always called by a numerous connection 'Uncle Josey,' he must have been one of the most excellent men of his day." This extract is furnished by Mrs. Margaret (Brent) MacKoy of Covington, Ky., a granddaughter of Gov. Chambers. The manuscript mentions that Gen. David Forman was one of the sons of Joseph and Betty Forman, and says further: "My grandmother and Aunt Betty Forman had two or more brothers, one of whom settled in Virginia and one in Maryland," and that Gen. Henry Lee was a descendant of the one who settled in Virginia. In the last statement he is doubtless mistaken. Miss Anna M. Woodhull of Freehold found in a deed dated March 18, 1761, the name of David Lee of Windsor, in Middlesex Co., N. J.

James Chambers married Sarah Lee, their son Rowland was the father of Gov. John Chambers. Gen. Benjamin Chambers, another son of James, married Elizabeth Forman, daughter of Ezekiel, son of Joseph and Elizabeth (Lee) Forman. Hence Gov. John Chambers and Judge Ezekiel Forman Chambers of Maryland were first cousins. (Information supplied by Mrs. MacKoy).

The Forman Family at Natchez and in the State of Mississippi.

80. Ezekiel Forman (1736-1795), second son of Joseph and Elizabeth Lee Forman, married as his first wife, Augustine (or Augustina) Marsh, a daughter of Thomas Marsh of Maryland. It was at Ezekiel Forman's house at Princeton, N. J., that his brother David was married in 1767. Ezekiel Forman was commissioned as High Sheriff of Kent Co., Md., January 14, 1776. The Archives of Maryland show that on Nov. 5, 1777, "Ezekiel Forman, Esq., is appointed Paymaster to the Eastern Shore Marching Militia . . ." In the same year he was a member of the council of safety of Maryland. He married his second wife, Margaret Neilson, at Philadelphia and was living there in 1789, when arrangements having been made by Gen. David Forman with the Spanish minister to procure land in the Natchez country, Ezekiel Forman with his family journeyed down the Ohio and Mississippi, and established himself as a tobacco planter at the Wilderness Plantation on St. Catherine's Creek, about four or five miles from Natchez. Here in 1795 he died. Besides Margaret Douglas Forman, aged 39; Ann, aged 14 months; David, aged 34; Ezekiel, aged 23; all children of the second marriage, there is buried at Natchez with her sons, Elizabeth, wife of Gen. Benjamin Chambers of Chestertown, Md., who was a daughter of the first marriage. In Major S. S. Forman's Narrative,

Ezekiel Forman is described as a "fine, portly looking man, neat and dignified; always wore powder, as all gentlemen did in those days, and large cocked hat."

In the fall of 1796, Gen. David Forman came to Natchez, and remained until the following August, when he left for his home at Chestertown, Maryland, and died before he reached there.

Major William Gordon Forman, Gen. David Forman's nephew and son-in-law, seems to have been the next member of the family to take up his residence at Natchez. He was a son of Joseph Forman of Shrewsbury, Monmouth Co., N. J., graduated at Princeton in 1786, and became a lawyer. Miss A. M. Woodhull, who was a niece of Major W. G. Forman's second wife, writes that he "introduced Eli Whitney's celebrated cotton-gin into the state of Mississippi. He had previously gone abroad, and was the first private American gentleman presented at the Court of George the Third. We have part of his costume worn on that occasion." He was Speaker of the House of Representatives in the Territorial Legislature of Mississippi in Jan'y, 1803.—(Claiborne's Mississippi—page 241). After his second wife's death, Major W. G. Forman started north with his little daughter to bring her to her grandfather's, Dr. Woodhull's, in Monmouth, and was murdered at Lexington, Ky., it is supposed for purposes of robbery, by negroes or men in the house where he was stopping.

The next to come into view at Natchez is Joseph, a brother of Major W. G. Forman. Joseph Forman bought the plantation on which his uncle Ezekiel had settled, and lived and died a much respected citizen of Natchez where he was prominent in starting the Presbyterian church. None of Joseph's sons grew to manhood. After the death of his eldest brother Stephen in Queen Anne's Co., Md., Joseph sent for Stephen's two young sons, Stephen, Jr., and Samuel. The widow of the elder Stephen married again at Red Bank, N. J., a Mr. Borden, and had two sons, Allen and Forman Borden, both of whom married and had children.

Stephen Forman the younger married in Mississippi, a granddaughter of Governor Howell, of New Jersey. Accounts of two of their sons will be given later.

THE HOWELL FAMILY.

81. ——— Howell of Caerleon, Wales, had a son, ——— Howell of Caerphilly, Glamorganshire, Wales, who removed to Delaware in 1690. The latter's grandson, Richard Howell, born in Delaware in 1753, married Keziah Burr, a member of the Society of Friends, and before the Revolutionary War was a lawyer at Mount Holly, N. J. He served with distinction in the Revolutionary War and rose to be Major of the Second New Jersey; became Governor of New Jersey in 1793 and was re-elected for several successive terms. One of his daughters, Sarah, afterwards Mrs. James Agnew of Pittsburgh, was one of the ten young ladies who scattered flowers in Washington's path at Trenton bridge, and Gov. Howell wrote the poetical welcome recited on that occasion. Wm. Burr Howell, fourth son of the Governor, became an officer in the Marine Corps, served in the war of 1812; came to Natchez.

Miss., after the close of that war and settled there. His house near Natchez was called "The Briers." Mrs. Jefferson Davis is a daughter of Wm. B. Howell. (Memoir of Jefferson Davis, 1890, by Mrs. Davis.)

RICHARD HOWELL FORMAN.

87. Richard Howell Forman, second son of Stephen and Keziah B. Howell Forman, was born in Jefferson Co., Miss., Feb. 19, 1833. After a year spent in New Orleans with a cotton factorage house, during which occurred the great yellow fever epidemic of 1853, he returned on account of failing health to his home, Rodney, Miss. Three years thereafter he engaged on his own account in a general mercantile business which was continued until the outbreak of the war. Although his health and strength did not permit his enduring the hardships of military service, he was warmly devoted to the Confederate cause and held throughout the war the office of commissioner, to look after the families of destitute soldiers. In 1865 he became engaged in planting and has been president of the Stock Breeders' Association of the county, of the Horticultural Association, and twice of the Jefferson County Planters, Mechanics and Manufacturers Association. In 1884 he was appointed commissioner from Mississippi to the New Orleans Exposition. He has also been one of the trustees of the Female Academy, and has held many other official positions, which indicate the esteem in which he is held in his native state and county. He is a member of the Presbyterian Church, in which he is an elder. He resides upon his plantation near Fayette, Jefferson Co., Miss.

GEN. THOMAS MARSH FORMAN OF "ROSE HILL," MD.

95. Thomas Marsh Forman, eldest son of Ezekiel and Augustine (Marsh) Forman, was born Aug. 20, 1758. Ezekiel was an elder brother of Gen. David Forman, and Augustine Marsh was a half sister of the General's wife. She was also descended from Augustine Herman, the founder of Bohemia Manor in Maryland in the 17th century. Thomas Marsh Forman joined Smallwood's Regiment as a cadet shortly before the battle of Long Island, the following winter was commissioned First Lieutenant in the Eleventh Pa. Regiment, subsequently became Captain in his Uncle David's Continental Regiment, and in 1779 succeeded James Monroe as staff officer to Maj. Gen. Lord Sterling. He served in the legislature in 1790, 1792 and 1800, and during the bombardment of Fort Mifflin in the war of 1812 commanded a brigade of militia. Gen. Thomas Marsh Forman inherited the fine estate of "Rose Hill" in Cecil Co., Maryland, which was during his lifetime the center of hospitality for the Eastern shore, and many distinguished persons were entertained there. During Lafayette's visit to this country in 1824 Gen. Thomas Marsh Forman went with his carriage with four horses and two servants in livery to meet the Marquis and took him in his carriage to Frenchtown where he took the steamboat to Baltimore.

Thomas Marsh Forman was prominent in racing matters, and became the first president of the Maryland Jockey Club in 1830. He died in 1845. See Rev. H. E. Hayden's "Virginia Genealogies" and Johnson's "History of Cecil Co., Maryland."

The name is represented in Maryland to-day by descendants of Col. Joseph Forman, a brother of Gen. T. M. Forman. His nephew, Ezekiel Forman Chambers, was a very distinguished lawyer, twice United States Senator, and for many years Judge of the Maryland Court of Appeals.

EZEKIEL MARSH FORMAN.¹

98. Across the Chesapeake and exactly opposite Annapolis stands Centreville, the county seat of Queen Anne's County, with a history that extends back to a very early period. Among its families are some that for several successive generations have been prominent in public affairs and have taken an active part in local history. To this class belongs the Forman family. Ezekiel Forman, a man of means (a nephew of Gen. Thomas Marsh Forman of Rose Hill, Cecil Co.) spent his entire life on the Eastern Shore, bearing a share in the development of its industries. He had a son, Ezekiel Thomas Marsh Forman, who was born in Chestertown, Kent Co., in 1821, and was educated at Washington College. Removing to Queen Anne's Co., he engaged in farming, but after a time settled in Centreville as a merchant. For a time he served as a Justice of the Peace. He was an Episcopalian. His death occurred very suddenly June 27, 1875. Ezekiel Forman had also a son, William Hemsley Forman, father of the well known business men of Baltimore: Frederick W., Richard, James Cranston, William H., and of Laura Forman, (Mrs. Grymes).

Ezekiel Forman married H. Maria Tilghman, daughter of Peregrine Tilghman of "Recovery," Queen Anne's Co. She was mother of four sons and two daughters viz: Peregrine, Henry, William, Ezekiel Marsh, Harriet and Araminta.

Ezekiel Marsh Forman, Jr., was born in Centreville, Jan. 15, 1859; at the age of thirteen he began to earn his own living. For eight years he was in the drug store of John Wooters of Centreville; then he bought an interest in the store of W. J. Hopper, remaining with him until 1888; since then he has been alone in business. He is an Episcopalian, and has been a vestryman since 1885. On the 28th of April 1881, he married S. Catherine Earle (daughter of Judge Samuel T. Earle) and has three children: Peregrine, Ezekiel and Mary Earle Forman.

HON. EZEKIEL FORMAN CHAMBERS.²

99. Gen. Benjamin Chambers, one of Kent's most distinguished citizens, was born in Pennsylvania, October 6, 1749, the son of James and Sarah Lee Chambers. He married June 11, 1783, Elizabeth, daughter of Ezekiel and Augustina Forman, and a grand-daughter of Thomas Marsh. From Pennsylvania he removed to Chestertown, Md., where he resided until his death. During the war of 1812, he held a commission of Brigadier General, and was in command of the troops in that part of the state. The only civil office held by Gen. Chambers was that of clerk of the court of Kent Co. Gen. Chambers died Jan. 10, 1816, leaving the following children: Thomas Marsh, Ezekiel, James, David, Benjamin Lee, Elizabeth Caroline (who married Col. Joseph Wickes) and William Henry. Two other children, Benjamin and Margaretta, died before their father.

The most distinguished of these children was Hon. Ezekiel Forman Chambers. He was born in Chestertown, Kent Co., Feb. 28, 1788. In 1809, he was admitted to the bar, and soon acquired a great reputation as a lawyer. During the war of 1812, he raised a volunteer company, of which he was captain; with his company he participated in the battle of Caulk'sfield, in the summer of 1811, and his bravery was especially mentioned in the official report of the battle. In 1826, the legislature of Maryland elected him to the Senate to fill the term of Mr. Edward Lloyd, (who had resigned); and he was re-elected in 1831. In 1834 being appointed judge of the Court of Appeals of Maryland, he resigned his seat in the Senate. He held the office of judge of the Court of Appeals for seventeen years; his opinions are characterized by clearness of analysis and strength of argument. His intellect was vigorous, and his quickness of perception almost amounted to intuition. When he retired from the bench in 1851, he resumed the practice of law with the same ability he displayed in early life. Judge Chambers was a member of the Episcopal church, and for more than thirty years was vestryman of the church in Chestertown. For many years he was president of the Board of Visitors of Washington College, (his alma mater).

Judge Chambers married Feb. 11, 1817, Sarah J. Bowers, daughter of Maj. Jas. Bowers of Kent Co., and had seven children, three of whom survived him. He died Feb. 28, 1867.

NOTE: The foregoing dates of birth, and the dates of death of the 6th, 8th and 11th children are from the family Bible of Gen. David Forman. The other information is mainly from the article by Miss A. M. Woodhull in the Monmouth Democrat.

GEN. DAVID FORMAN.

Gen. David Forman was born in Monmouth County, New Jersey, November 3, 1745, (presumably according to the old style calendar). His father was Joseph Forman, a successful shipping merchant in the city of New York, who retired from business and settled on one of his farms in Monmouth Co., New Jersey. Joseph Forman married Elizabeth Lee, who was of Scotch extraction, and David was their fourth son.

In June, 1776, David Forman went as colonel in Heard's brigade of militia, which was sent by New Jersey to re-enforce Washington's army at New York. He seems to have attracted favorable notice, for, not only was he sent to suppress a loyalist rising in Monmouth, in Nov. 1776, but, congress having authorized the sixteen additional regiments (in Dec. 1776) Washington in the following month offered the command of one of them to David Forman. On March 5, 1777, he became Brigadier General in the New Jersey militia, and as such took part in the battle of Germantown. In consequence of a difference with the New Jersey assembly, Gen. Forman resigned his Brigadier General's commission in November, 1777. The continental command above mentioned, "Forman's Regiment," was never completely organized, and, some time in the year 1778, was divided up among other commands.

Gen. Forman is said to have believed that he could be of more service in Monmouth than by remaining with the army. His services during the last two years and a half of the war in collecting information in regard to the position and movements of the ships of the enemy in and about the harbor of New York, were of great utility to Washington and highly commended by him, particularly during the Yorktown campaign.

It may be noted that at the court martial of Gen. Charles Lee, Gen. Forman who had been directed to accompany that officer at the battle of Monmouth, appeared as a witness against Lee. Also in the spring of 1782, Gen. Forman took the leading part in laying the case of the hanging of Capt. Joshua Huddy before Washington.

The Tories charged Gen. Forman with cruelty, giving him the nickname of "Devil David." Gov. William Livingston they called "the archfiend," so we may doubt the justice of the charge. The name "Black David" is sometimes said to have been applied to Gen. Forman, but we believe properly belongs to Sheriff David Forman, his first cousin, who was so designated to distinguish him from the General.

Gen. Forman was judge of the Court of Common Pleas, member of the Cincinnati, vice president of the New Jersey branch of same from 1791 to 1793.

In February 1794, he removed to Chestertown, Maryland, the native state of his wife.

In Sept., 1796, he left Chestertown to attend to an estate which he owned near Natchez. There he had a stroke of apoplexy. Having recovered sufficiently to travel, the ship on which he took passage at New Orleans was captured on the voyage by a British privateer and conveyed to New Providence in the Bahamas. Anxiety and disappointment as to seeing his family, added to his enfeebled condition, brought about his death on Sept. 12, 1797. His wife was Ann Marsh whom he married Feb. 28, 1767. There were eleven children, of whom only five daughters grew up. Col. John Laurens (see his Army Correspondence)¹ wrote in 1778 in a very complimentary manner of Gen. Forman, and Mrs. Richard Stockton of "Morven," Princeton, wrote a poem on him, printed by Miss A. M. Woodhull in her article in the Monmouth Democrat, (1873.)

His will which is at Trenton (Liber D of Wills, pages 421, &c.) is dated Sept. 30, 1746, provides for his wife and six children, three sons and three daughters, and also a child which might be born after his death. The Forman Family in Kentucky, Descendants of Thomas Forman.

104. In the fall of 1789, Thomas Forman, the son of Ezekiel and Elizabeth (Seabrooke) Forman, removed from New Jersey with his family to what is now Mason Co., Kentucky. The house which he occupied, built of stone, stands but a short distance from the town of Washington. On a hill in sight of the house is a family burying ground, but many, perhaps most of the family, including Thomas and his wife, lie in the old Baptist cemetery in the town itself. Thomas Forman was a large landowner in Kentucky and a member of the legislature in 1797.

Thomas Forman's sons, except John who removed to Lewis Co., lived in Mason Co., Ky. Ezekiel, the eldest, had six sons that grew to manhood. Thomas Seabrooke Forman, the eldest of these, removed to Louisville in 1839, and there lived until his death. Of his eldest son, Col. James Brown Forman, of Louisville, an account will later be given. Accounts will also be given of other members of this branch of the family. Of the six sons of Joseph Forman, Thomas' second son, we may note the third, George L. Forman, long the most prominent representative of the family in Mason Co. He was widely and favorably known, and was a member of the legislature in 1859-61, and in 1873-75. George L. Forman was a Union man during the Civil War and had two sons in the Union army, but his eldest son, Samuel Tebbs Forman, took the opposite side and was mortally wounded at the battle of Shiloh while Adjutant of the 4th Kentucky Regiment in the Confederate army. Samuel, Thomas Forman's youngest son, if we exclude one who died in boyhood, was six feet four inches tall and of a most robust constitution which served him in good stead in the fall and winter of 1814-15 when he served as an ensign (2d Lieutenant) in a Kentucky regiment at and near Fort Malden, Canada, during the second war with England. Samuel's eldest son, General Thomas Morgan Forman, was a Brigadier General in the Kentucky militia and member of the legislature in 1839-40.

NOTES.

²"The first brick house in Mason Co., Ky., was built by Simon Kenton and was for many years owned by Thomas Wood Forman." (See paragraph 124.)

"Dolly Wood, wife of Ezekiel Forman, was the second white child born in Mason County; she was born in 1786."

Thomas Forman of Monmouth Co., was one of the commissioners for drafting men for the 2d regiment of New Jersey militia, August 14, 1778, presumably identical with the above-named Thomas.

COL. JAMES BROWN FORMAN.

108. James Brown Forman, son of Thomas Seabrooke and Mary Ann (Brown) Forman, was born in Louisville, Ky., Dec. 12, 1842. In the summer of 1861 he entered the U. S. Volunteers as 1st Lieutenant of Company C, 15th Kentucky Volunteer Infantry. Upon the death of his superior officer he soon became captain. At the battle of Perryville or Chaplin Hills, all the field officers of the 15th Kentucky were killed and wounded, and Captain Forman although the junior captain was promoted to its colonelcy by Gov. Robinson for great gallantry. Major W. P. McDowell, of Louisville writes, (in a letter, May, 1896): "The gallantry at Perryville alluded to was Co. 'C' being the 'color company' had charge of the regimental flag, which was in charge of nine non-commissioned officers. These nine men were killed while in charge of the colors, the flag staff was cut in two by bullets, and the colors went down. Capt. Forman rushed to them, and finding the staff too short to display them, mounted a rail fence in front of the regiment and waved the flag therefrom, which must have inspired any wavering heart to deeds of valor." In a message of Gov. J. B. Robinson of February 28, 1863, printed in the Frankfort Tri-Weekly Commonwealth, of March 4, 1863, it is stated that in a hand to hand encounter, after the flag had been wrested from Captain Forman's grasp by overpowering numerical strength, "it was recaptured and securely held until the close of the dreadful conflict." The Governor says: "Before going into his last battle he caused the old and tattered flag of the regiment, which had been presented to him as the reward of his personal prowess, to be conveyed to me. . . ." The Governor was requested by him to preserve it among the state archives.

The following remarkable incident is related by Major W. P. McDowell. It should be stated that at the battle of Stone River (or Murfreesborough) Major McDowell was serving as chief of staff to Gen. Rousseau. Major McDowell writes: "Col. J. B. Forman was my friend from early boyhood. We were engaged together in raising Co. 'C' 15th Ky., I as captain and he as lieutenant, and were always fast friends. He had a very stylish black horse which I admired and tried to buy from him. As I was riding with him and the field officers of the 15th to place the regiment in line of battle at Stone River, he remarked: 'Will you have always wanted this horse; now it is my desire that after this battle you should have him. I will be killed in the fight, and I call on you gentlemen (addressing his field officers) to see that he gets him.' Major McDowell rallied him and said: 'Jimmie, if you are going to be killed let me have him now and take my horse,' but he answered: 'I am in earnest; I know what I am talking about and I want you to remember. I will be killed, you will be wounded, and the horse will also be wounded, and I want Major Allen to see that the horse is cared for and given to you.' All occurred as he said. He was killed and fell from his horse, the horse was wounded three times in the left hind leg, and Major McDowell was wounded in the left arm. While convalescent from his wound, Major McDowell was met in Louisville by Mr. William J. Anderson, Col. Forman's brother-in-law, who informed him that the horse was in a livery stable at his disposal. Major Allen having conveyed the request, Major McDowell writes that he kept the horse until his death.

Col. Forman was killed about 9 a. m., Dec. 31, 1862. He was buried at Cave Hill cemetery, at Louisville, and by his side rests his brother, Lieutenant Ezekiel Seabrooke Forman, who was wounded at Perryville, but survived the war. Both were tall, handsome young men, James a little over six feet, Ezekiel nearly six feet tall.

 THE RICE FAMILY.

¹—Thomas Rice, an Englishman of Welsh extraction, was an early adventurer in Virginia, and a settler in Hanover Co. Here he left his wife with nine sons and three daughters and went to England to receive a considerable estate which had been left him, but returned no more. The sailors reported he had died at sea. It was supposed that he had been assassinated. No return was ever made of the property after which he had gone and his family were left destitute in a strange land." Thomas' grandson, Rev. David Rice (1733-1816), was the founder of the Presbyterian church in Kentucky, which has erected a monument to his memory.

REV. CHARLES WILLIAM FORMAN.

119. The Rev. Charles William Forman was born near Washington, Kentucky, March 3, 1821, d. at Kasauli, India, Aug. 27, 1894. He was the son of Ezekiel and Dolly (Wood) Forman. He graduated at Centre College, Danville, Ky., in October, 1844; passing through the theological seminary at Princeton, N. J., he was ordained at Washington, Ky., in 1847. In August of that year he sailed from New York, landing at Calcutta, January 28, 1848. After spending a few months at Agra and Umballa, and nearly a year at Lodiana, he went to Lahore in 1849 on the annexation of the Punjab to British India. The work of the mission was largely educational and he gave much attention to the schools which he superintended. In 1870 as many as 1600 pupils attended in the main and branch schools together. There was also a night school for adults. He also preached much, as well as wrote. Through the several generations who were educated in the schools he became widely known, and both English and natives held him in high esteem. The Civil and Military Gazette, Aug. 30, 1894, says: "He enjoyed in a very unusual degree the confidence of many leading members of the European community, by whose liberality his work was largely helped. Such men as Lord Lawrence, Sir Donald McLeod, Sir Robert Montgomery, and Sir Charles Aitchison believed not only in the work he was doing, but also believed in the laborious, unselfish and unassuming missionary, and gladly aided him by their sympathy and contributions. "No man in any walk of life could be more unceasingly diligent than he was in his. He had one aim in all that he did. He never seemed to think of what men might say or think of him: warm-hearted, genial and loving, he drew men to him, and it always was to do them good. Beyond all doubt the Punjab is the better for his having lived in it." "The success in life of his pupils was always a source of great pleasure to him, and his recommendations for securing employments were always at the disposal of his pupils." (Lahore Tribune, Sept. 8, 1894). He took much interest in the establishment of a college which, after his death, was called "Forman College" in his honor, and a chapel in which he was accustomed to preach to English-speaking native Christians was rebuilt and called "Forman Chapel." When he died in 1894 he had been at Lahore over forty years. He visited the United States in 1867, returning to Lahore in 1869, again in 1880, and lastly in 1892. Three of his sons are now missionaries in India.

SAMUEL TEBBS FORMAN.

131. Samuel Tebbs Forman, the eldest son of Hon. George L. Forman, of Mason Co., Ky., and Alice Ann, daughter of Judge Samuel Tebbs, was born Dec.
 28, 1834. Although his father was a Union man and two of his brothers were in the Union army, he joined the Confederate army and was 1st Lieutenant of Company I, Fourth Kentucky Regiment. His story is best told by the following documents:

Head Quarters: 4th Division.

Camp on field of battle.

Dear Sir:

8th April, 1862.

Your son is a prisoner and wounded. Among so many thousands of wounded
 I failed to find him though I have searched diligently. Gen. Grant had ordered him to be delivered into my hands; I enclose the order endorsed to you. Come and get him before he goes to one of the prisons north, or it will be hard to get him out afterwards. He is now at Savanna on the other side of the Tennessee River, 10 miles from here.

My Division covered itself with glory in the battle of yesterday.

Yours truly,

Geo. L. Forman, Esqr.,

W. NELSON.

Washington, Mason Co., Ky.

Brig. Genl.

Head Quarters, Dist. of West Tenn.,

Pittsburg, April 8th, 1862.

Guards will deliver over to Brig. Gen. Wm. Nelson Saml. F. (sic) Forman, a prisoner now in our possession. By command Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant.

W. R. ROWLEY, Aid De Camp.

[Endorsement:]

The guards of whatever post having in charge the prisoner referred to on the other side of this paper will deliver him to the bearer of this order who is the father of the young man, and a true and loyal citizen of my native county in Kentucky.

Camp on the field of battle,

W. NELSON, Brig. General.

8th April, 1862,

Pittsburg Landing, Tenn.

G. L. Forman,

Salem, Ills., April 22, '62.

Sir

From a dying request of your son, S. T. Forman, Adjutant 4th Kentucky Regiment, that I should write and inform you of his sad fate, [I would say] he was wounded on Sunday through the thigh, breaking the bone in two places. If his leg had been amputated in time he might have been saved. He lay out in the rain Sunday night and was never brought in until Tuesday. He was so much prostrated that all the stimulants and care failed to bring on reaction. He died Tuesday night and was buried the morning following. He gave to Lieut. Ellis belonging to General Nelson's staff three hundred dollars and his pistol, which you can obtain by making application to the general or the lieutenant. No doubt you have heard of his death ere this. As the Third Kentucky Union Regiment fought against the Fourth Kentucky Confederate Regiment, General Crusoe of Kentucky called to see the Adjutant the evening before he died. I have nothing further to relate, but should be pleased to hear of your receiving these few lines.

Yours truly,

W. HILL, Surgeon 48th Reg. Ill. Volunteers, Retired.

Another letter from Dr. Hill, dated April 29, 1862, furnishes some additional details, giving information as to the situation of Lieut. Forman's grave. Dr. Hill writes: "If you go up to Pittsburg Landing be sure to call on Lieut. Calvin Sandford of the 48th Reg. Ills. Vol., as he with the balance of us became very much attached to him during his suffering which he bore like a hero. . . . I do, Mr. Forman, sympathize with you, though a stranger." Notwithstanding the kind doctor's information the grave could not be identified.

DR. AARON FORMAN AND HIS SONS.

Dr. Aaron Forman (1745-1805) removed from Monmouth Co. to Hunterdon Co., N. J., in 1766. He was a physician, a warm advocate of inoculation for small-pox, and introduced it extensively in his own neighborhood. He was undoubtedly a Tory and probably suffered much loss of property in consequence. He was an Episcopalian: his wife, Ann Emley, was a Quaker. Dr. Aaron Forman was of small stature, polished and courtly and carefully dressed, and when aroused, very irascible. When his wife died he had a large slab erected to her memory in the Friends' burying ground where no monuments were allowed, and though twice notified to remove it, he ignored the order. The elders of the meeting then waited upon him and informed him that if he did not remove the slab, they would. He replied, "I will shoot the first man who dares touch it," and it stands to this day. Hence the statement in the sketch of his life in the N. J. Medical Society Records that he erected a "monument" to his wife's memory, which sounds strange to the uninitiated.

A portrait of Dr. Aaron Forman's eldest son, Ezekiel, is in the possession of Mrs. John Moses of Trenton, New Jersey.

John Emley Forman, second son of Dr. Aaron Forman, lived to be very old—a just, upright, elegant old gentleman, a widower for over fifty years, of considerable fortune, and a power in his own community, a sort of gentleman farmer. He called himself a Quaker. He and his brother Robert married the two Rakestraw sisters, beautiful women, and heiresses, and very accomplished. A handsome portrait of John Emley Forman exists.

Robert Emley Forman, fourth son, was a merchant and was ruined by the sudden lifting of the embargo after the war of 1812, having bought heavily at high prices. It broke his heart and he died a discouraged man.

Elisha Forman, Dr. Aaron Forman's fifth and youngest son, was an early convert to Methodism. He was a small devout, artistic old gentleman, loving beautiful churches with his artistic sense, but attending the rigorously plain Methodist service because he believed it right. He was named for his great grandfather Elisha Laurence.

JOHN MOSES.

John Moses, who married Olivia Gardner Forman, as has been stated above, was born in Belfast, Ireland. He came first to Philadelphia and afterwards to Trenton, New Jersey, of which city he became one of the leading manufacturers. He established at Trenton one of the first large potteries of that city, and was for a number of years president of the Potters' National Association. He was active in other manufacturing enterprises, was president of the Trenton Watch Company, at one time president of the Mechanics National Bank, and was one of the founders and the first president of the Trenton Trust and Safe Deposit Co. Mr. Moses was a considerate and kind employer, a good and useful citizen, and most exemplary and estimable in all the relations of life. He was a member of the Episcopal Church. He died January 20, 1902, at the age of 70, leaving several sons who worthily fill their father's place.

NOTE.—The foregoing list was kindly furnished by Miss Anna Matilda Woodhull of Freehold, N. J., who stated that it is from the Wyckoff Family Record. In 1839 Capt. Wm. [Wyckoff] Forman was living at Middletown Point. He had been captain of a merchant vessel, and had never married. His sister, Mrs. Jones, was then a widow living at New Brunswick. These facts are derived from MS. account of a visit to New Jersey by Rev. Ezekiel Forman of Kentucky, while a student at Princeton Seminary. Capt. Wm. Forman at an earlier date had visited his Kentucky relatives.

OTHER DESCENDANTS OF ROBERT FORMAN OF LONG ISLAND.

150. Aaron Forman, Jr., son of Aaron, and grandson of Robert, married Susannah Townsend. They had sons: Aaron 3d, Isaac and Jacob. Jacob Forman removed from Oyster Bay to Westchester Co., N. Y., about 1726-7. He had sons: John and James. James was a loyalist and removed after the Revolution to Fredrickton, New Brunswick. A son of James, whose name is not given, had the following sons: George Forman, who founded the town of Forman, Lake Co., Michigan, and died in 1889 at Stratford, Canada; Col. C. H. Forman, who founded the town of Forman, North Dakota, where he was living in 1890; and Jacob Forman, who died leaving a widow, Mrs. Emily Shaw Forman, and an only son, Herbert Shaw Forman, both of Cambridge, Mass.

John Forman, the brother of James, removed about 1798 from Westchester Co. to Tioga Co., N. Y., and had a son Miles. Miles Forman had sons: Smith Forman (who had sons), Sands Forman, Miles Forman, Jr. and Ferris Forman.

Ferris Forman was born in Tioga Co., N. Y. He left Tioga at an early age and settled in Vandalia, Ills., was appointed district attorney by President Van Buren; was a colonel in the Mexican War; removed to Sacramento, California, when gold was discovered in California; became secretary of state of California; then returned to Illinois. In 1892 he was living at Stockton, Cal. with his daughter Mrs. Anna Forman Peters, and was then in his 86th year. He had also a son, Sands W. Forman of San Francisco.

Sands Forman, brother of Col. Ferris Forman, had sons: Charles Forman, of Los Angeles, Cal., and Edward Forman of Chicago, Illinois.

The foregoing information is due to Mr. Wm. Henry Forman of New York City.

Other Families Whose Connection With the Foregoing Has Not Been Traced.

JUDGE JOSHUA FORMAN.

151. The ancestry of this distinguished man has been certainly traced, it would seem, no further than his father, Joseph Forman, who was born probably in New Jersey, according to the statement of Hon. Elias W. Leavenworth in the Leavenworth Genealogy, on July 27, 1752. Mr. Leavenworth believed him to have been related to General David Forman, and Miss or Mrs. Ellen E. Dickinson who wrote the article on Judge Joshua Forman in the Magazine of American History, Vol. 8, held the same belief. However, a definite statement of what the supposed relationship was, is not furnished by either writer. The material for the present sketch has been obtained from both accounts.

Joseph Forman, the father of Joshua, was a merchant in New York city at the breaking out of the Revolutionary War. He then retired to Pleasant Valley, Dutchess Co., where his eldest son Joshua was born, Sept. 6, 1777. Near the close of the eighteenth century he removed to Troy, N. Y., where he was a member of the firm of Forman & Tracy, and was a deacon in the Presbyterian church. He removed to Onondaga Hollow after his distinguished son Joshua had gone there, and there he is buried.

Joshua Forman, as has been just stated, was born in 1777 in Pleasant Valley, Dutchess Co., N. Y. He was educated at Union College at Schenectady, N. Y., where he graduated with honor, and studied law at Poughkeepsie and New York city. Soon after completing his professional studies he married Margaret Alexander. She was the daughter of Boyd Alexander, M. P., for Glasgow, and was on a visit to this country at the time. Their meeting is said to have been under romantic circumstances—but the particulars are not given by the narrator.

In 1800 Joshua Forman removed from New York City to the promising village of Onondaga Valley, then called Onondaga Hollow, and his father and brothers and sisters also removed thither. A law partnership was formed with William H. Sabine, his brother in law, in 1803. The business prospered, and the firm became widely known in the state. On the organization of the Court of Common Pleas in ¹Joseph may have been, so far as the dates go, a son of Jonathan Forman, Jr. See paragraph 52.

1813, Joshua Forman was appointed judge, and served ten years in that capacity. Having been elected to the state assembly in 1807, he became impressed with the importance of constructing a canal to connect Lake Erie with the sea, and introduced the resolution looking to the construction of the Erie canal, directing a survey to be made of the most eligible and direct route. The measure was long looked upon as visionary, but, as all know, was eventually carried out to the great benefit of the state and city of New York. In November, 1825, when the canal had at last been completed, and Governor Clinton and his suite were making their first passage through the canal, Judge Forman was selected to make the address to the governor at Syracuse, and the governor in his speech made reference to Judge Forman's connection with the inception of the great work. As a member of the committee from Syracuse, Judge Forman also attended the ceremonies of mingling the waters of Lake Erie with the ocean at Sandy Hook.

In 1819 Judge Forman founded the city of Syracuse. There were previous to his coming but two frame houses on the site. He removed there and was the means of its becoming a growing and prosperous city. There is in Syracuse a small park called "Forman Park" in honor of the founder, and a monument has been erected to his memory in the same city.

In 1826 he removed to New Brunswick, New Jersey, where he was interested in a copper mine. Shortly after his removal to New Jersey, the banking laws of New York were seen to be defective, and on Gov. Van Buren's invitation Judge Forman presented to the legislative committee of New York a plan which he had formed and at the governor's request drew up the "Safety Fund Banking Act," which most successfully accomplished the objects for which it was designed. During the Civil War period the United States government employed the idea of this act in establishing the national banks.

In 1830 he removed to Rutherfordton, North Carolina, where he had purchased an extensive tract of land—some 300,000 acres—and there passed the remainder of his life. He established there a newspaper, a printing press, and a stage line, and was the leading citizen of that part of the state. His first wife having died in New Jersey, he married Miss Sarah Garrett of Warm Springs, Tenn. In 1831 he visited Syracuse, and was presented by the citizens with a silver pitcher and goblets, suitably inscribed. He visited Syracuse again in 1846, and a public dinner was given in his honor. A few years after this visit he died at Rutherfordton, and was buried at Syracuse in the Oakwood cemetery.

Judge Joshua Forman was an eloquent speaker, an able lawyer, and a most useful and public spirited citizen. Of a social and happy disposition, well informed, and possessed of the ability to impart his knowledge to others, he had, as Mr. J. V. H. Clark (the writer of Clark's Onondaga) justly remarks, a mind of no ordinary cast.

Mr. Clark's book has been freely drawn upon by Mr. Leavenworth, and also by Mr. G. S. Strong—(Early Landmarks of Syracuse, pub. 1894).

152. THE LISTS OF EMIGRANTS compiled by John Camden Hotten under the heading: Dead in Virginia since April last, Feb. 16, 1623, has: "At west and Sherlow hundred.—Samuel Foreman, &c."

THE PENSION OFFICE RECORDS show an Aaron Forman, born in Frederic Co., Virginia, 1755. In the fall of 1776 he went to Hagerstown, Maryland, and enlisted under Captain Andrew Hines and Colonel Schryhawk, commanding Maryland troops; was at Fort Lee when Fort Washington on the Hudson was captured by the British, etc. He spent in all twenty-one months in the service, the latter part of which was on the Western frontier. Application for pension is dated July, 1834.

STEPHEN W. FORMAN of Martinsburg, Va., was in 1809 a member of the Union Philosophical Society of Dickinson College, Carlisle, Pa. (Register of the members, 1843).

THE ANCESTRY OF HON. WILLIAM S. FORMAN, former Member of Congress from Illinois, has (writes Mr. William Henry Forman) been traced to his great-grandfather, William Forman, who, about the close of the Revolution removed from one of the Eastern states to Bourbon Co., Kentucky, near Middletown on a creek called Stoner. He died there about 1810 or earlier. He had seven sons and three daughters. Among the sons were Aaron, Joseph and John. Hon. William S. Forman has a son, Charles W., who is a graduate of the Naval Academy at Annapolis.

Another descendant of the William just mentioned was the Rev. Aaron Parker Forman, D. D., an eminent Presbyterian minister, born in Ralls Co., Missouri.

1827, d. Cortland, Ala., 1875. He was a graduate of Centre College, Ky., and studied theology at the Princeton Seminary. He had a son, William, and a grandson, John W. Forman of Canton, Missouri. Missouri."
